New Agency For Europe Aid Backed By Senators

Committee Votes For Administrator With Cabinet Rank; Sweeping Powers

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee reached swift and unanimous agreement yesterday on the method of administering the European Recovery Program.

It voted to set up a new government agency under an administrator who would have Cabinet rank and sweeping powers. It brushed aside any idea of setting up a board of directors as in the case of a business corporation.

Instead, it agreed to make the administrator solely responsible for judging the needs of European nations, for formulating the program, for managing it efficiently, and for ending it wherever and whenever necessary.

It also gave him power to decide whether to make a loan or free grant to any of the participating nations, after consulting with the National Advisory Council, the top interdepartmental agency on foreign economic problems.

Advisory Board of 12

The administrator would be flanked by a bipartisan advisory board of 12 members representing the "public interest." These men would be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, with no more than seven of the dozen members belonging to either political party.

As a watchdog over the work of the new agency, there would be a joint congressional committee of 14 members, with full access to ERP information. A similar arrangement was made in the act setting up the Atomic Energy Commission in 1946, and its use in the case of ERP was proposed months ago by the Harriman Committee.

Finally, there would be a $25,000-a-year roving ambassador to represent the United States at the headquarters of whatever continuing organization may be set up by the 16 European countries. There would be separate American economic recovery missions in each of the 16 countries, headed by officials of ministerial rank but independent of the local American embassies or legations.

Announced by Vandenberg

Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg announced the committee's agreement on this section of the Senate's ERP bill yesterday, saying that Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas had represented the State Department during the committee's meetings. If there was any State Department objection, the Senator said he did not hear it.

The committee's decision, the first major compromise on the Marshall Plan legislation, follows almost completely the recent report of the Brookings Institution which was afterward approved by Secretary Marshall.

It does not give the State Department any direct veto power over the new agency, but simply entitles the Secretary of State to go to the President as ultimate umpire of any dispute that might arise.

This is what the proposed bill will have to say of relations between the State Department and the new ERP agency:

Miners Protest Pit Closing With 'Stay-Down' Strike

Sheffield, Eng., Feb. 10 (AP).—Three hundred miners are staging a "stay down" strike in the Waleswood Mine, demanding that it not be closed.

Their demonstration started Monday upon reports that the National Coal Board planned to close the mine as uneconomical. The miners asserted 18 million tons of workable coal remain. The pit employs 700 men.

The strikers debated, sang, played cards and ate fish and chips. They sent up a letter saying "All is well."

Truman Order On GSI Denied By Fleming

Contradicts Report He Was Commanded To Settle Strike

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming denied yesterday that he is under White House orders to require GSI to bargain with its striking cafeteria workers.

But President Truman chose to make no comment on the story, reported yesterday in The Washington Post.

Fleming, the Government's agent in a contract with GSI for operation of the cafeterias, denied the story at a hastily summoned session of Representative Clare E. Hoffman's (R., Mich.) Special Labor Subcommittee.

After reading from The Washington Post, Hoffman asked Fleming:

"Have you received any such orders?"

"I have not," replied Fleming.

"Oh, dear," groaned Hoffman.

No Comment

Earlier, at the White House, Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters the President "has no comment on the strike situation beyond what he has already said; namely, that the situation is entirely in the hands of Secretary Schwellenbach."

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach was ordered by President Truman January 20 to do what he could to settle the strike, now 37 days old.

"Does that mean the story in The Washington Post is wrong?" a reporter asked Ross.

"I have no further comment to make on it," said Ross.

Additional information gathered by The Washington Post last night, meanwhile, reinforced the earlier story that the White House has made very clear its determination to have Fleming persuade GSI into a settlement.

Fleming showed up at the White House during the day and told reporters there he had no intention of cancelling GSI's contract. He has the authority to do this on six months' notice.

Reporter Silent in Source

At the Capitol Hill hearing, Hoffman summoned this reporter from the press table to find out where he had received the information for yesterday's story.

The reporter explained that the story had been told by a reliable Government source under strict confidence and that the reporter preferred to withhold the source's name.

"You get us all hot and bothered, don't you see," said Hoffman.

Hoffman said he had asked James Russell Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post, to make a statement before the committee this morning.

7 Boys Presenting Own Aid Program Hear Special Talk

Secretary of State George C. Marshall made an extemporaneous speech on the state of the world yesterday—exclusively for seven cub scouts from Bethesda, Md.

The boys, aged 9 to 11, members of Boy Scout Cub Pack No. 232, called upon the author of the European Recovery Plan to tell him about their own little Marshall plan, a project to raise funds to feed eight hungry European boys for a year.

Decked out in their blue and gold uniforms, the boys were awed as Marshall greeted them in his big and fancy office at the State Department. They shook hands all around and Marshall asked:

"Who is the chairman of this group?"

Cub Scout Robert Keith Linden, 9, of 7906 Chelton rd., Bethesda, spoke up, said he was, and delivered his speech:

"Mr. Secretary, we are proud and happy to have met you and want to do everything we can to help the children of Europe."

Sit Down with Marshall

Marshall seated his guests around a highly polished table and, speaking slowly and passing his attention from one boy to the other, he said:

"That is a fine speech. You said it all in one sentence.

"I am really pleased to meet you, knowing what you are planning to do. I think that is a very fine thing. When I was a boy, I do not believe it would have been possible.

"As a matter of fact, in those days, about all we knew of the world was through our histories and our geographies. We learned something of Europe, something of Africa, something of Asia. We knew they had kangaroos in Australia, and hot springs in New Zealand, but not much else.

"As a matter of fact, as I recall, 10 to 15 miles was about our limit, because that meant a 20 to 30-mile drive or ride before you got home. When the bicycle came in, that let us a little father out.

Knew Little of World

"We knew little about the world—we knew little about the United States except for those fortunate few who could travel. Now, of course, that is all changed.

"Just very recently, I returned from London, and I returned from Rio de Janeiro in Brazil, in a single night. I went to dinner in Salt Lake iCty the other day. I did not leave here until afternoon, and I had dinner at 8 o'clock in Salt Lake City. And I was again in Washington at 9 o'clock the next morning.

"Salt Lake City in my day was something I knew about from the history of the Mormons, and I myself had never seen it. I thought probably I would never live to see it. Today all that is changed.

"I remember the first thing I was aware of in Manila, of the Philippines, was when Admiral Dewey sailed from Hongkong at the opening of the Spanish-American War. That was in 1898. I knew

Chest Merger Plan Details Are Revealed

All Private, Public Welfare and Social Groups Would Unite

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Details of the long-awaited plan for the merger of the Community Chest of Washington and the Council of Social Agencies were revealed yesterday.

It calls for organization of the United Community Services of Washington, which would include Community Chest agencies, community organizations, non-Chest private agencies, public (tax) agencies and the public at large.

Its Main Aims

It is designed to have these main effects:

1. Give Washington citizens a chance to get in their "nickel's worth" in deciding what projects should be undertaken.

2. Enlist widespread community support for the needs of public welfare, so that congressional appropriations can meet public needs, and private welfare will not have to spend money for cases public welfare should handle.

3. Bolster representation in welfare activities by city-wide organizations such as business groups, women's clubs, service clubs, labor organizations, citizens and civic federations and cultural associations.

The merger plan recognizes "the primary dependence for ultimate success upon community lay people" and calls for lay leadership in governing and assuming operating control of United Community Services.

Advice for Trustees

Professional social workers would be used in an advisory capacity by a board of trustees, committees and forums of a general assembly.

Representation on UCS, drawn from the five categories, would function in the general assembly, to serve as a sounding board for actions on policy and administration; the board of trustees, which would be the policy-making body, and an executive committee, under which the executive director and nine standing committees would function.

The plan has been approved by the executive committee of the Community Chest and the board of directors of the Council of Social Agencies. Meetings are scheduled next week for both parent groups, and if they approve the

Early Action To Be Sought On Rule Bill

Next Step in House Scheduled in Month; Auchincloss Pleased As Hearings End

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

Congressional District leaders will seek to present Washington home-rule legislation to the House, for action early next month, possibly March 8.

This was disclosed yesterday as hearings ended on the Auchincloss-Ball bill for District reorganization and home rule.

In the hearing finale, Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) declared "there is no doubt in my mind from the testimony that a vast majority of the people living in the District is in favor of the home-rule bill."

Lauds Witnesses' Sincerity

His statement was ready by Dr. George B. Galloway, home-rule subcommittee staff director. Then, speaking for himself, Dr. Galloway said "the preponderant weight of testimony, in my opinion, tends to support the fundamental features of the proposed statute. These hearings have refreshed our confidence in the people of Washington and our faith in the democratic process."

Auchincloss' statement declared: "The sincerity displayed by the witnesses, their courtesy to the committee, and their undoubted loyalty as first-rate Americans cannot but impress one that if the residents of the District are permitted to select their own representatives for their local government, their choice will be of high caliber and in the real American tradition."

Acting Next on Revisions

With the hearing over, the next move will be for the committee staff, Dr. Galloway and Clarence M. Pierce, to tabulate the changes in the bill proposed during the hearings. This will be followed by executive meetings—probably joint meetings of the House and Senate Home-Rule Subcommittees headed by Auchincloss and Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.)—to consider revisions. The subcommittees would report separately to their main District Committees, and it would be up to these committees to decide finally on forwarding the bill to the House and Senate.

After the hearing, Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), former House District chairman, now the member of Auchincloss group who had been regarded as least likely to vote for home rule, declared that with sufficient rewriting a bill might be prepared which he would support.

Sentiment Is Divided

The bill now calls for giving Washington an elected council and elected school board. A council-appointed manager would run 12 major city departments. The school board would run schools and libraries. Major city legislation would be prepared by the council, but would become law only if not vetoed by either House of Congress of by the President.

Witnesses were divided yesterday on home rule.

Strong support for the plan was voiced by two prominent Washington women. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former American Minister to Norway, and Mrs. Grace Dunlop Peter, self-styled as "one of what they call the cave-dwellers."

Mrs. Harriman told the committee she would make her statement "short and sweet":

"I want to make it plain at once that after 35 years' residence in the District I am fed up with taxation without representation," said Mrs. Harriman.

"I am in favor of full suffrage

Drop in Food Prices Begins in District as Markets Slump Again

Stocks Move Down Sharply With Grains Falling Limit

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Prices of commodities and stocks resumed last week's decline yesterday, after Monday's short-lived rally.

All grains, except some distant oats futures, fell the full limits permitted in one day's trading.

Joining in the decline, cotton fell the daily limit of $10 a bale (two cents a pound). Hides, soybeans, cocoa and cottonseed oil—all commodities with direct relationship to the cost of living—went down as far as they could in one session.

In its extent, the break was more severe than any registered last week. The Dow-Jones Commodity Futures Index declined $6.10—the sharpest one-day drop since compilation was started in October, 1933.

The stock market also experienced its sharpest reaction in 10 months. With declines ranging from $1 to $5 a share, the Associated Press Index of 60 stocks was down to a new low since last June.

Only livestock, which made a 16-month record drop Monday, withstood the bearish influence. Prices of cattle and hogs generally held at Monady's lowest figures. An expected flood of livestock into the packing centers, comparable to Monday's extraordinary receipts, failed to materialize.

After the close of the markets the Department of Agriculture released its monthly crop report. This showed a marked decline in milk and egg production, but indicated that January weather, like that of December, was favorable to the winter wheat crop.

January's production of milk, the department said, was 8,365,000 pounds, compared with 8,911,000 pounds last year. Production, the report said, "was the smallest for the month since 1941. Both the number of milk cows and output per cow were less than last January."

Part of the drop, the report stated, "was due to unfavorable weather, but the amount of grain and other concentrates per milk cow was down substantially from a year ago."

Although January's cold weather caused some damage to growing vegetables and citrus crops in the South, the report said that a "near-record production of citrus is still in prospect."

The break in grain prices was attributed by traders to (1) the

Decrease Include Bacon, Ham, Butter, Sugar, Shortening At Various Stores

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Scattered price drops in a wide variety of foods were listed by food chains here yesterday.

Some brands of bacon were down 10 cents a pound over last week; sugar dropped four cents for a 10-pound bag in one chain; steak and ham fell 10 cents a pound in some chains, and most stores cut shortening prives two cents a pound.

Butter, on a downward trend this week, following a sharp rise the week before, dropped 4 cents a pound in one chain.

'Gambling on Costs'

Several food officials warned that most of the price cuts were made on the speculative basis customary in a falling market—the belief that the market will remain low long enough to carry through to the retail level.

"We are gambling, as we often do, that our food-replacement costs will be cheaper," said one chain official.

Lower prices for almost all cuts of meat are expected to be in effect here this weekend or early next week, as a result of price breaks on the livestock market.

The 2 cents a pound drop in the price of shortening yesterday was announced by three national manufacturers, Lever Bros., Procter & Gamble, and the Humko Co.

The reduction immediately became effective in many stores here, and one chain cut the price of a 3-pound can from $1.19 to $1.12.

Most stores previously cut prices on lard and flour.

Housewives seeking food savings in their shopping yesterday found that while prices on some brands of meat and groceries had declined, price cuts did not necessarily follow through on all brands of the same commodity.

One food official said this was because reductions were handled on a purely competitive basis. "We're just striking out on our own," he said, "cutting where we think we have to, to meet competition."

Economists Issue Warning

In New York, economists warned that price reductions were relatively on a small scale, with no assurance they will be permanent.

The Associated Press reported that some grocers in Cleveland, New York and Chattanooga admitted their price slashes were "loss leaders," intended to lure customers into the store.

But Boston and Atlanta merchants denied there were any "loss leaders" in their new prices.

Food dealers in Chicago and Mobile, the Associated Press reported, said frankly that they were taking advantage of the publicity from spectacular market breaks in their prices.

While cautious shoppers sought advantage of the price changes, whatever the reason, there was bad news for consumers on another front—clothing.

The American Woolen Co. announced in New York an 8-to-12 per cent boost on men's worsted suiting fabrics for next fall.

Other companies indicated they will follow this rise, which will increase suit costs $4 over 1947 prices.

Aid Cost Estimated At $1248 per Family

Chicago, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—The average American family will pay out about $1248 for this country's postwar relief expenditures, including the European Recovery Program, Senator Edwin Martin (R., Pa.) estimated tonight.

Martin, in an address at the Lincoln Day dinner of the Illinois Republican State Central Committee, said that from July 1, 1945, to June 30, 1947, the United States spent more than 24 billion dollars on European relief. The E. R. P. total, as presented to Congress, is 17 billion dollars for four years beginning April 1.

"In other words, postwar relief up to now, plus the Marshall plan, will cost the American people 41 billion dollars," he said.

Martin said the aid program threatens to be "so wasteful of our resources that we may become the authors and the finishers of our own destruction."

Truman Wants Prices High, Taft Charges

Seeks 'Stranglehold' Over U. S. Economy, Ohio Senator Says

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 10 (AP).—Senator Taft R., Ohio) tonight accused President Truman of demanding "a strangle hold over all industry, agriculture and commerce."

The Ohio GOP presidential candidate entered the cornbelt with a new charge that the Administration is striving to keep the price of grains and other items at a high level.

"The truth is," Taft said, "the Administration would be completely upset if prices turned down substantially.

'Imitation New Deal'

"They want the benefit of the boom—with higher prices for the poor consumer, and then try to blame the high prices on the Republicans, who haven't controlled Administration policy for 15 years."

As a part of this move, the Senator said, Mr. Truman has proposed an "imitation New Deal" with "police state" powers to control the American economy.

"The President now demands a strangle hold over all industry, agriculture and commerce. He demands that he be given power in time of peace to impose price controls and wage controls, that some Federal bureau fix the terms of each one of a billion transactions that go on every day in the United States," Taft said.

Anderson Denies Charge

Earlier Taft said that "while President Truman talks about stopping inflation, every department in Government does everything it can to keep prices from dropping."

He repeated his charge that Secretary of Agriculture Anderson had talked of buying 50 million bushels of wheat to keep grain prices up.

In a letter to Taft, Anderson has denied this. He said it "may eventually be possible to buy another 50 million bushels for export" but

Going Broke, Cripps Tells Britons Again

Calls on Country To Close 'Menacing' Export-Import Gap

London, Feb. 10 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told Britons again today they are in danger of going broke.

In a government White Paper, he gave the figures on the "menacing" gap between the country's income from exports and outlay for imports.

The total net drain in sterling area funds to fill the gap in 1947 was £1,023,000,000 ($4,092,000,000).

Drained out were 151 million pounds ($604,000,000) from the last-ditch gold and dollar reserves.

The United Kingdom's gold and dollar reserves, monetary basis for the entire sterling area, had dropped by January 1 to 512 million pounds ($2,048,000,000), he said.

Only 100 million dollars remains of the $3,750,000,000 American loan advanced two years ago.

The drain, he said, must "be closed by our own efforts, supported by the Marshall Plan."

"A supreme effort must be made this year to remedy our external position. Abnormal world conditions render the task particularly difficult, but there is no alternative," Cripps declared.

Should the drain on the monetary reserves continue at the 1947 rate—as Sir Stafford said it did last month—the reserve would last no longer than six months.

In three months, Cripps said, it would drop to point where the stability of sterling as a currency would be endangered.

Marine Landing Craft Upset; Deaths Reported

Oceanside, Calif., Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Several Marine Corps landing craft overturned in high seas north of here during maneuvers today. Unconfirmed reports said half a dozen bodies were washed ashore.

Backlog in Municipal Court

Appellate Judges Enlisted To Clear Up Civil Jury Cases

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Judges of the Municipal Court of Appeals have been listed in a campaign to eliminate a backlog of 935 civil jury cases in Municipal Court.

This was disclosed yesterday in a joint announcement by Chief Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court of Appeals and Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court.

The action follows closely a meeting of a committee of the District Bar Association with all judges of Municipal Court January 30, at which time conditions of the court were discussed and recommendations made.

It will be the second time in 16 months that appellate judges have assisted in clearing a backlog. In October, 1946, the upper court sat for nearly a month in Landlord and Tenant Court cases.

Beginning Friday, Chief Judge Cayton and Appeals Court Judge Brice Clagett will begin serving in the lower court. Judge Clagett's assignment is until March 16. Chief Judge Cayton will sit in Municipal Court for two weeks, then will be succeeded by Appeals Court Judge Andrew M. Hood whose assignment extends through March 16.

The announcement said that Chief Judge Barse has assigned himself and Judge Walter J. Casey to full time duty on civil jury trials.

Chief Judge Barse said that all other Municipal Court judges

Ends 37 Years of Service

Eisenhower Bids Farewell To Army as 'Fellow Soldier'

Bidding farewell to the troops he commanded, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declares that his "fondest boast" always shall be: "I was their fellow-soldier."

Ike's departing message to the Army, dispatched Saturday when he retired as Chief of Staff, was made public yesterday at the Pentagon. It said:

"To the American soldier:

"Departure from my present post breaks many ties that are dear to me. But the separation is not complete. I take with me the knowledge that, both by law and in my own heart, my service with you shall not end as long as I live. Assurance of such fellowship is my most prized possession, for no man can have a more worthy comrade and loyal friend than the American soldier.

"For 37 years I have been privileged to serve with men who manifested, in their performance of every duty, the stout hearts of Americans and the spirit of our Nation. Pride of service, loyalty to the flag, love of country strengthened them beyond the common strength given to men.

"Whatever their rank or Army, they were before all else soldiers, heirs to generations of soldierly tradition, distinguished for soldierly virtue. What they have done to preserve their country from its enemies and to free their world from evil tyrannies is written large in human history. My words add nothing to their fame. But I cannot let this day pass without telling them, the fighting men of ground and air—those who have left the ranks and you who still wear the uniform—that my fondest boast shall always be: 'I was their fellow soldier.'"

Ice Wrecks Span's Supports

Three Men in Vehicles Drown As Rehoboth Bridge Collapses

Rehoboth, Del., Feb. 10 (AP).—An approach of the $500,000 Charles W. Cullen Bridge collapsed into Indian River today, carrying three men to death. A fourth man was rescued, and a fifth swam ashore.

Ice floes undermined the arched stone span. A truck and a sedan carrying five employes of a Philadelphia electrical contractor plunged into the river.

Truck Driver John B. Adams, Berlin, Md., was killed. Benjamin L. Wagaman, jr., 27, Georgetown, Del., died at a hospital of exposure. Pasquale Capone, Dover, Del., was listed as missing but presumed dead.

Boat Operator James E. Stewart said about 50 feet of the bridge was wrecked.

Engineers reported pilings around the center support also have been broken away by ice and the entire bridge is in danger of collapse.

Ice was so thick that concrete blocks from the crumbled approach, along with the truck and sedan, were carried 75 feet before they sank.

James E. Clark, Dover, swam ashore and was taken to a hospital suffering from shock and exposure. A Coast Guard crew, fished out William L. Quesada, 26, Salisbury, Md.

The men made their headquarters in Rehoboth Beach. They had been working on a contract for the Eastern Shore Power Supply Co., erecting a line along Ocean dr. They were en route to the job along State Route 14 when the bridge approach crashed.

Almond Is Named To Apperson Post

Follow Arts Board

Planners Fail To Back Krug On Annex

If Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug asks Congress to halt construction of the Pan American Union annex in the triangle in front of his building, he will have to do it alone.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday joined the Fine Arts Commission in turning down his request to make it a three-pronged appeal.

In a letter to Krug, released yesterday, Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, 3d, chairman of the planning group, said that he did not think that the annex building will deface Constitution ave., or damage plans for the development of Washington's central area.

Excavations already are under way for the building in the area bounded by Constitution and Virginia aves. and by 18th and 19th sts.

Krug contends that the building will stick out a hundred feet or more beyond the Constitution ave. building line. Krug's predecessor, Harold Ickes, also opposed the annex in the triangle but critics said it was because it would block the view from his office of Constitution ave.

On Krug's objection, General Grant had this to say:

"Some of us have thought the extension of the building itself ahead of the fronts of the buildings to the west actually an advantage in balancing the similar buttress on the hill and Pharmaceutical Building at the other end of Constitution ave., and screening from view the back of the Pan American Building as you drive east on the avenue."

The Fine Arts Commission, in turning down Krug's request, said the triangle site is "most suitable from point of view of esthetics."

Krug's office said yesterday it didn't know whether the Secretary will carry the matter to Congress.

Assembly Action Is Tantamount To Appointment

Richmond, Va., Feb. 10 (Spl.).—U. S. Representative J. Lindsay Almond, jr., of Roanoke, was today nominated Attorney General of Virginia, at a joint Democratic caucus of the General Assembly here.

Almond

He will succeed Harvey B. Apperson, also of Roanoke, who died February 2 of coronary thrombosis.

Almond's nomination, tantamount in Virginia to appointment, was made unanimous, but only after futile but spirited pleas for the candidacy of Former Delegate John B. Spiers, of Radford. Spiers, an Independent Democrat, "was fated for this political assassination" said his sponsors.

Representative Almond, in Washington for Virginia's Sixth Congressional District, and he would accept the position despite its reduction in salary (from about $15,000 to about $10,000) since "service to one's State is also compensation."

Will Be Candidate

He said he "entertained no fear of adverse consequences" in his former plans to run for reelection to Congress, and that he was preparing to file as congressional candidate when notified of his nomination. He added that he never solicited the State post and that it "never occurred" to him "to project" himself into the State scene at Apperson's death.

Almond said he could not leave Washington immediately because of matters "to which I have committed myself."

The vote for Almond's nomination was made unanimous after a roll call vote gave him a 90-to-34 majority over Spiers. Six of the 130 Democrats in the Assembly were absent.

Delegate Robert Whiteside of Nelson, who seconded Spiers' nomination, termed Spiers' political independence as "a virtue in Washington, but a sin in Richmond."

Spiers' "Doom" Seen

"No sooner had the breath of life left our beloved Harvey B. Apperson than the word went out that Spiers should be sealed off and doomed," declared Whiteside, whose views frequently clash with dominant organization forces. "I say to you gentlemen, John Spiers has been the victims of a political assassination."

Representative Almond, 49, a native of Charlottesville, began law practice in Roanoke in 1923. In January, 1930, he became assistant Commonwealth's attorney. Appointed a judge of Hustings Court, Roanoke City, in February, 1933, he resigned from that bench, January 1, 1946, to seek the Sixth District seat, and was elected to fill the unexpired term of Clifton A. Woodrum. Woodrum resigned January 1, 1946, to return to private enterprise.

Representative Almond was reelected to the eightieth Congress, now in second session.

Housing Cost Laid in Part to Realty Boards

The National Association of Real Estate Boards was accused by the Government yesterday of partial responsibility for the high cost of housing.

Government attorneys made the charge in District Court before Associate Justice F. Dickinson Letts. He took under advisement a Government plea that the national association and the Washington board be enjoined from continuing alleged "fixing" of commission fees.

Justice Department lawyers alleged the association tells its 28,000 members to follow the price scale of fees and commissions set by the local boards. They said such "price fixing" raises the cost of housing.

Roger J. Whiteford, association attorney, replied that the group advised members to charge locally established rates which he said were "fair and reasonable."

Trial of the boards on criminal charges arising from the alleged fee-fixing is pending in District Court.

Dog Racng Plan Is Pro Tested At Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 10 (Spl.).—More than 300 persons tonight protested proposed legalization of dog racing in Anne Arundel County at a hearing held by the Board of County Commissioners. No one spoke in favor of the proposal.

Weems Duvall, chairman of the board, said he did not know who placed on his desk the petition urging legalization of dog racing.

Several ministers, among those protesting, said professional gambling could only bring out the "basest elements" in men and would attract undesirable elements to the county.

Storm Boosts Traffic Ticket Adjustments

Traffic tickets adjusted in Washington last week numbered 38 more than the previous week's total of 127.

Police reported that cars broken down, skidded or pushed, cars unable to get close to the curb because of ice and snow, and persons who were too sick to move their cars, accounted for 31 of the 165-ticket adjustments during the week.

Among those who had their tickets adjusted were three who claimed diplomatic immunity. They were Dr. Benjamin R. Castro, 3400 Garfield st. nw., son of the El Salvadorean Ambassador; George B. De Oliveria, who lives at the Wardman Park, and is employed by the Brazilian Embassy and Anthony C. Koo of the Chinese Embassy.

Tally of adjusted tickets, by precincts, showed 16 for No. 1; 8 for No. 2; 22 for No. 3; 6 for No. 4; 6 for No. 5; 12 for No. 6; 10 for No. 7; 9 for No. 8; 3 for No. 9; 31 for No. 10; 3 for No. 11; 6 for No. 12 and 12 for No. 13.

Engagement Of Margaret Is Denied

". . . one or two . . . calls"

A report that Margaret Truman is engaged to be married was contradicted yesterday by the White House.

"The answer is positively no," Charles G. Ross, the President's press secretary, said when asked about a report in Walter Winchell's column that she is engaged to Frank Handy of Ypsilanti, Mich.

Mrs. Reathel Odum, secretary to Mrs. Truman, backed him up.

"Definitely not so," she said.

The President's daughter was not available to reporters.

Handy, reached in Chicago, said that with the White House denying the report, "I think I'll stand on that."

Earlier, he said that before commenting on the report he would have to make "one or two long distance calls."

Handy was in Chicago for the winter meeting of the Inland Press Association. His father, G. C. Handy, is publisher of the Ypsilanti Press.

[The United Press quoted Handy as saying he met Miss Truman in 1945 when he was an interpreter in the State Department and had seen her several times since. He moved into the State Department's foreign service in 1941 from the post of Pnited Press bureau manager at Caracas, Venezuela. After the war he became assistant to his father, publisher of the Ypsilanti Press.—Editor's Note.]

Post Story Brings All the Pineapple Woman, 103, Asks

When Mrs. Mary Ann Robinson celebrated her 103d birthday in Southampton, England, last September, there wasn't enough pineapple on the table to tempt a hungry Hawaiian.

Yesterday, because of a story printed in The Washington Post on that occasion five months ago, Mrs. Robinson was able to eat pineapple to her heart's content.

The pineapple was a gift sent Mrs. Robinspn by Mrs. Pearl Payseur Poore of 9051 River View r., Silesia, Md. Mrs. Poore sent the gift after reading an AP dispatch last September that described how nurses at the public institution where Mrs. Robinson lives had looked high and low for pineapple and unearthed only one small can.

Mrs. Robinson had said she wanted "pineapple and custard" for her birthday party. The package from Washington arrived last weekend. It also included a flannel bathrobe and other gifts. Yesterday Mrs. Robinson shared her pineapple with a half dozen other elderly ladies at a second party.

2 School Bids Approved in Montgomery

School construction bids on two projects totalling almost $84,000 were approved yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Education.

At its regular metting in Rockville, the board also appointed 15 teachers, accepted the resignations of five others and approved high-school graduation dates.

A bid of $42,360 by Warthen and Ward, of Gaitherburg, for construction of a three-classroom addition to the Parkside Elementary School was approved, as was a $41,499 bid by Carter-Turner Engineering Co., of Takoma Park, for remodeling a shower and dressing rooms at Leland Memorial Junior High School.

Teachers appointed were: Miss Jane A. Funderburg, Bethesda; Mrs. Helen K. Clendenin, Chevy Chase; Mrs. Roxie G. Conyers, Alta Vista; Mrs. Helen A. Palmer, secretary at Chevy Chase; Mrs. Katherine M. Godsey, Takoma Park; Mrs. Erma L. Halliday, Four Corners; Mrs. C. O. Lawrence, Four Corners; Mrs. Esther M. Rice, Woodlin; Miss Marjorie Roach and Mrs. Gladys Georgia, Gaithersburg; Hugh B. Tresselt, Damascus; Frederick L. Dunn, Montgomery Hills; Ernest Jawetz and Mrs. Margaret Erter, Junior College.

Appointed as psychologist in charge of the mental testing program was Mrs. Edith P. Poponoe.

Teachers who resigned were: Miss Bess Sheppard and Mrs. Allie B. Greene of Four Corners; Mrs. Hilda H. Howse, Damascus; Mrs. Eleanor C. Holmead, Montgomery Blair, and Herbert F. Seversmith, Junior College.

Graduation dates approved were: Junior College, June 9; Poolesville and Gaithersburg Highs, June 21; Lincoln High School, June 23, and all other high schools, June 22.

The board also discussed with a committee from the Montgomery County Education Association adjustments in the salary schedule to level out "inequites" discovered last year.

School Bond Issue Sale Voted in Prince Georges

Sale of a two-million-dollar issue of bonds to provide funds for the current school-building program wa sauthorized yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Education.

Bids will be asked for the issue to be opened at noon March 9 in the board's offices at Upper Marlboro.

The board appointed the following teachers: Martha Shields, Forestville; Zella Ermlich, Calvert Houses; Claire oCnway, Suitland; Dora Dangherty, Lanham; Frances Startup, Edmonston; Jeannette Tooney, Mount Rainier; Pauline Saunders, Maryland Park High; Virginia Wedeberg, Greenbelt High, and Helen Runyon, Oxon Hill High.

School clerks were named as follows: Mrs. Edna C. Wilson, Brandywine; Mrs. Bernardine F. Barlow, North End at Greenbelt; Mrs. Shirley Broderick, Cheverly-Ruxedo, and Miss Alberta Graham, Seat Pleasant.

Stocks Move Down Sharply With Grains Falling Limit

prospects for continued limiting of the use of grain by distillers, (2) prospects for better European crops next year, and (3) declining estimates by the Department of Agriculture for exports of grain.

In contrast to Monday, virtually all livestock in the larger stockyards were sold by closing time last night. With the continuing decline in grain prices, and with livestock prices holding at present levels, marketin; experts saw a possibility that farmers might hold back more livestock for further feeding than was planned before grain prices dropped.

The break in prices on the New York Stock Exchange was estimated last night to have wiped out more than a billion dollars in valuation of listed securities.

Butter prices dropped from half a cent to 2 cents a pound on the New York wholesale market.

The Associated Press wholesale price index of 35 basic commodities dropped 3.01 points, the sharpest decline in 10 months. The slump rolled the price level of these commodities back to that of last September 2.

Chairman August H. Andresen (R., Minn.) of the special House committee investigating speculation in commodities, opened up the day's argument by asking Anderson for the name of the market speculator who sold a million bushels of wheat short last week and made $400,000 in the transaction. Anderson, in a message to Chicago Board of Trade officials Monday, had reported that one man sold a million bushels short Wednesday.

"We want to know if the trader had inside information," Andresen said. "On a transaction like that he must have had a margin of close to a million dollars, and it looks like he knew in advance what was going to happen."

In reply Anderson declared that "Andresen's statement is so far away from the actual facts that the inevitable conclusion must be that it was issued primarily for political reasons."

Anderson denied that Government operations caused the market crash, and defied Andresen to name one man who had "advance inside information" with which to profit on the break. He charged Andresen with "bear-hunting with an empty gun."

Meantime the department reported in its regular situation report that "stocks of corn, oats and barley in all positions on January totaled 61 million tons, the smallest in any year since 1937, and 25 per cent less than a year earlier."

Baruch Sees Break As 'A Good Thing'

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Sun, New York evening newspaper, today quoted Bernard Baruch, financier, as saying the break in commodity prices is a good thing and does not forecast a business depression.

Baruch's views were expressed, the Sun said, in an interview.

"The break in commodities had to come," Baruch was quoted. "Everyone in the world feels hunger stalking at his door. Every country in the world is planting the largest food crop in history.

"If we can get peace, if only an 'armed peace,' we will have enormous activity in business. Everybody in the world wants something and we would be fools to give it to them for nothing, but if they will work they can make a living. If they don't work it will be a waste of energy to supply them and if we do supply them anyhow, why, of course, they won't work."

D. C. Friends Ask Aid for Woman on Trial in Hungary

Fifteen Washington friends of Miss Elizabeth Proiszl-Pallos, one-time District resident now on t[rial] for espionage by a Hungarian court, sent a petition in her behalf yesterday to the State Department.

Miss Proiszl-Pallos, 31, a United States citizen who attended St. Martin's Parochial School here from 1924 to 1929, is accused of participation in a conspiracy against the Soviet-dominated regime.

Mrs. Joseph Delaney, 32, of 3102 9th st. S., Arlington, Va., a former classmate, said the signers had asked the State Department to "see that justice is done."

Miss Proiszl-Pallos served last year as secretary-interpreter for Jack Guinn, Budapest correspondent for the Asociated Press who was expelled last November. Last week Miss Proiszl-Pallos testified she knew nothing of Guinn's alleged cooperation with American intelligence operatives.

Needs of Red Cross Stressed

"Big giver" response to the pre-campaign appeal of the 1940 Red Cross drive is up to the standard of last year, but "still higher amounts" must be raised.

This was announced yesterday by Chairman Robert Woods Bliss at the initial report luncheon of the special gifts division, at the Chamber of Commerce Building. The intake to date was not divulged.

"The purpose of the special gifts division is to spearhead the annual drive," Bliss told some 75 volunteer solicitors. "On the results of your work will really depend the success of that drive."

No definite goal has been set for the special gifts division. The area-wide campaign for $1,080,000 opens March 1.

General Campaign Chairman Joseph C. Grew urged good teamwork among all volunteer units and said that "if you are successful, I haven't the slightest doubt that the March campaign will be successful."

Nathaniel C. Wilson, manager of the District Red Cross Chapter, also spoke briefly.

Home Building Cut Seen Slump Threat

Housing Expediter Points to Danger in Report to Truman

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods warned yesterday that a falling off of home construction might serve to touch off a general business recession.

Woods' comment was made to President Truman in his annual report. It was released yesterday as a House Banking Committtee, winding up hearings on rent control, heard a CIO report that many landlords expect a complete end to rent regulation at the end of this month.

John W. Edelman, speaking for the CIO Textile Workers Union, told the committee that he had received many phone calls in the last 24 hours indicating that "landlords must have had some assurances from Washington or elsewhere that the sky would be the limit as of March 1."

Rent Increases Threatened

He explained that "Oour members report to us that just during the past few days they have been given notice in considerable numbers that they pay much higher rentals beginning with next month or they get out in the snow and ice and find themselves other places in which to live."

Republican and Democratic leaders of both Houses of Congress have promised to continue rent controls beyond the present February 29 expiration date. The Senate Banking Committee will again consider a subcommittee's extension bill next Monday and the House Banking Committee hopes to complete drafting its version by next Tuesday.

Woods' report, a summary of his agency's work in 1947, said that a drop in home building "may well precede a general recession and may constitute a significant factor in bringing such a recession about."

"Drastic Need" of Space . . . . . .

Looking at the future, Woods said:

"There is a 'drastic need" for more houses to rent.

The "major threat" in homebuilding construction is the "high and continuing rise in costs."

"If homes are to be built in the volume required to meet the need, estimated at 1,500,000 annually, the ordinary distribution pattern of basic materials like iron and steel would fail to supply the building materials producers with the quantities needed."

But Was It Sold?

'Buyer' Takes Possession Of 'Quoddy

Eastport, Me., Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Samuel A. Greco, 48, of Lebanon, Pa., breezed into town today and "seized control" of the deserted multi-million-dollar Passamaquoddy tidewater project.

Though the War Assets Administration said the property had not been sold, Greco, a self-styled businessman, flashed a canceled certified check for $1000 payable to the Treasurer of the United States.

On the back of the check was the notation, "Down payment on Quoddy."

(In Washington, a WAA spokesman, emphasizing that "no disposition whatever" had been made of Quoddy, said Greco was one of 10 prospective buyers who recently submitted bids. Like the others, he put up a check for $1000 as a "good faith" deposit, the WAA said.)

After enlisting the aid of a bewildered fruit store proprietor, Greco accomplished the following in eight furio..s hours:

1. Took "physical possession" of the huge project.
2. Fired the resident engineer, a Government Civil Service employe.
3. Wired the FBI in Washington he had "taken over."
4. Placed announcements of his seizure in the newspapers of Eastport, Machias and Lubec.
5. Offered houses on the property for sale to war veterans.
6. Promised to disclose his plans for "disposition of the project" at a city council meeting tomorrow night.

Greco engaged rooms at the East Hotel and then dropped into the fruit and confectionery store of Mario Conti.

"I've come to take over Quoddy," he confided to the thunderstruck storekeeper. He flashed the check. "I need someone to drive me around. It'll be worth your while."

Conti chauffered Greco to the project. Greco walked to a deserted sentry post and raised his hand.

"I hereby take physcial possession of Quoddy," he said solemnly.

Then they rode to the administration building where Resident Engineer John Roche was minding his own business.

"I'm sorry," said Greco, lighting one cigarette from the butt of another, "but I can't be responsible for your salary any longer."

Roche said the was okay. He said he understood. He backed out and went home.

Judges to Help Clear Docket would help reduce the backlog of civil jury cases when not engaged in actual trial of other cases.

An extra panel of 100 prospective jurors has been summoned to appear in court Friday at9:30 a. m. Those who qualify as jurors will be available for trials the following Monday. It is planned to have four civil court jury courts operating simultaneously Monday.

The court records show that at the beginning of the year there were more than 700 cases involving Class A actions ($500 to $3000) and more than 200 Class B actions ($50 to $500). The records also show that about 300 criminal cases are currently awaiting jury trial.

Chief Judge Cayton defended the shift of Appeals Court judges to the lower court as a temporary expedient but declared that over a long period such a program would be "self defeating."

Certain "difficulties and complications" will result from the program, he predicted. The most obvious one, he said, is that when cases are appealed from the decision of an appellate judge who served as a trial judge, that judge automatically becomes disqualified to sit on the appeal.

British-Made Fords To Be Shipped to U. S.

London, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Henry Ford announced here tonight that 6000 British-made Fords will be shipped to the United States in the next six months.

He said the shpiments would bring about $4,500,000 into Britain and added that he would drive the first American-bound car off the assembly line at his Dagenham plant tomorrow.

Ford and his wife arrived at Southampton today on the Queen Mary.

Ex-Major Asks Francs Found In Brittany

A former Army major has asked the United States Court of Claims to declare him rightful owner of more than 200,000 French francs he found in a lingerie-crammed suitcase during the Normandy invasion.

The claimant is Bedford F. Foster, 40, of Buffalo, N. Y., now on immigration inspector at Niagara Falls. He is represented by a Washington attorney, Nathan L. Silberberg.

Foster found the franc-filled suitcase on a dusty road in the suburbs of St. Malo, Brittany, on August 10, 1944, he says. He gave the francs to the regiment finance officer and received a receipt for $4129.12, then the dollar equivalent of the francs.

The Department of the Army ruled against Foster's claim for the money, declaring it was public property captured from the enemy. The money deposited in the treasury's general fund. Foster insists it was private property and cites the old, old rule of finders keepers.

2 Mothers Save 4 Children From Burning Car on Bridge

Their car catching on fire on the north end of the 14th st. bridge, two mothers yesterday rescued thtir four tiny children with the aid of an anonymous Army major.

The mothers were Mrs. Wesley B. Sarles of 2616 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, and her sister, Mrs. William Hockaday of Corpus Christi, Tex.

The rescued children were Margartt Sarles, 2, and his 7-year-old sister, Susan, and Carol Ann Hockaday, 3, and her 5-month-old brother, Jimmy.

The Sarleses and the Hockadays—on a visit here—were driving to Hyattsville to visit another sister yesterday around 10 a. m., when they smelled smoke.

Mrs. Sarles, driving the Hockaday car, pulled up to the curb just opposite the Jefferson Memorial. The two women lifted the hood and found the motor on fire.

A passing woman motorist drove them to the Sarles residence.

The car was ruined.

Role of United States

"But the greatest chance of all, I think—I know—is in the position of the United States in the world, from being little known and almost ignored when I was your age.

"In the short period of my lifetime, we are now recognized everywhere as being the most powerful Nation in the world and being the acknowledged leader in the world.

"Therefore, I think it is all the more impressive and all the finer for a group of boys your age to undertake what you are now trying to do. That is a generous and fine action on your part for the children of Europe who are so much in need of help. And it is of great international importance in establishing relations of friendship and good will and trust that are so important to our Government, to our people and to the world and to peace.

"Therefore, I am very glad to welcome you here and I congratulate you as part of the Boy Scout organization in taking the lead in what you are doing—what you are setting out to do.

"I wish that I could have had something like that in my record as a boy. And I thank you very much."

Back to World Worries

And then the veteran soldier, who passed his boyhood around Uniontown, Pa., where he was born on New Year's Eve in December, 1880, turned back to his desk and the worries of the shrinking world.

Before the boys left, Marshall gave each one a handshake and an autographed photograph.

Robert Linden's father, Keith Linden, who is secretary to Representative Cecil King (D. Calif.), and Edwin V. Dove, both members of the cub pack's parent committee, supervised the boys' trip to the State Department.

Other Bethesda boys in the delegation were Willis W. Reeder, 10, of 4505 Harling lane; Paul S. Schmid, 10, of 4623 Maple ave.; Irving Tucker, 9, of 4602 Chestnut st.; Ronald E. Dove, 10, of 4510 Gladwyn dr.; Walter A. Johnson, 10, of 4794 Glenbrook pl., and Donald F. Sheller, 11, of 4560 Chelsea st.

The boys and the buddies in Cub Pack 232 are arranging a benefit Lust-Bethesda Theater. They hope to raise enough to provide a year's care for eight European boys at $120 a boy.

Truman Greets Boys

By The Associated Press

Twelve Boy Scouts visited President Truman at the White House yesterday. They said they had a "grand time."

"He was swell to us," Eagle Scout Jack Brader, 15, Stone Church, Pa., told reporters. "He acted just like another fellow."

The visit was the climax of Boy Scout Week. Mr. Truman is honoring president of the Boy Scouts.

The group presented Mr. Truman with a "report to the Nation." This summarized services performed by Scouts during the past year. The Scouts also gave the President an official Boy Scout statuette.

The 12 were guests of Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Play Budget Parley Called

The District Recreation Board yesterday called a meeting of "organized citizenry" to review the 1949 budget estimates.

The session was set for 8 p. m. Tuesday, March 16, at the District Recreation Department, 3149 16th st. nw.

Chairman Harry S. Wender expressed "general approval" of the "compromise" settlement on the D. C. Armory, which gives control to a three-member board at the regular meeting of the recreation board.

He revealed, simultaneously, that efforts to use local public pools for ice - skating purposes have proven unsatisfactory "because of constant thawing." He said the high expense does not justify continuation of the program.

The board also heard reports on the Auchincloss hearings, the Chest X-ray survey and the department's tree-planting program.

Undertaker Says Mt. Vernon U. Gave Him 2 Honorary Degrees

Atlanta, Feb. 10 (AP).—A Dalton, Ga., undertaker and insurance man who expected to receive an honorary degree in humanity, testified today he was awarded two honorary law degrees by Mount Vernon University of Washington, D. C.

Henry Clay Kenemer, Dalton undertaker, told a Federal Trade Commission examiner he had engaged in charity work and possibly was entitled to a humanity degree. He said he made inquiries and learned the school was "not a reputable, outstanding university."

The commission has charged officials of the school with misrepresenting its status as an educational institution and with improperly awarding and selling degrees. The complaint charges the school has none of the facilities, equipment and faculty described in advertisements.

Hearing of testimony was adjourned today until February 16 when the case will be resumed in Tampa, Fla., to hear additional witnesses.

Kenemer testified he was not aware that the university listed him as a member of its board of directors.

34 Known Dead, 4 Missing as Fire Sweeps Newfoundland Home for Aged

St. John's, NF., Feb. 10 (AP).—Thirty-four persons were officially reported dead and four missing in a fire here today that destroyed an old people's home.

The Public Welfare Department could account for only five survivors out of the 43 residents. Some of these suffered exposure and frostbite in the subzero cold.

A 50-mile-an-hour gale fanned the flames out of control in the three-story concrete building known as Hull House. It was used as a shelter for indigent and infirm persons awaiting admission to a permanent home for the aged.

The origin of the fire was not determined. Firemen struggled repeatedly to gain entrance to the building, formerly a private residence, but were turned back by the flames.

Nine bodies were discovered in a single room. Some of the inmates succeeded in reaching windows but collapsed. Several had suffocated or died of burns in their beds.

2 Freighters In Distress Await Aid

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Two distressed ships, American and British freighters, today wallowed in turbulent North Atlantic waters 800 miles east of Halifax, Nova Scotia, awaiting arrival of rescue ships.

The vessels were the United States Lines' Pierre S. Dupont, which sent an SOS saying she had a crack in her hull, and the British ship Clunepark, which radioed that her rudder had been damaged severely.

The freighter Henry Baldwin was reported nearing the DuPont, and the freighter John Fiske was on the way to aid the Clunepark. The Coast Guard cutter Duane also was sent to help the United States ship.

Capt. Eric K. Eriksen, of Brooklyn, master of the 7176-ton Dupont, did not seem alarmed at the condition of his vessel.

He reported the ship was taking water but was "still under control" and "riding easy."

The Clunepark was reported bound for Europe from Halifax.

Waves up to 25 feet high and winds of 35 to 50 miles an hour were reported in the area of the two freighters, which were about 90 miles apart.

Tanker Blast Injures 2

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—An explosion in the engineroom of the self-propelled tanker Richmond, carrying 252,000 gallons of fuel oil, today injured two crew members. The ship was in the upper New York Bay near the Statue of Liberty.

Bridge Collapse Carries Three to Death

REHOBOTH SPAN GIVES WAY—The south end (arrow) of the million-dollar Charles Cullen suspension bridge between Bethany and Rehoboth beaches collapsed yesterday as a truck and a sedan were passing over the span. Both vehicles dropped into the ice-bound Indian River, carrying three persons to their death. Two other persons were rescued from the water plan, steps will be taken to put it into operation.

The council delegate body meets February 16 and the Chest board of trustees meets February 20. At least 60 days will be needed to set up machinery for basic operation of the plan. Officials hope it will be well into operation by June 1, when decision will be made on what agencies are to receive Community Chest funds next year.

A united program for community welfare is the goal of the contemplated organization, with the basic principle of "superiority of the total community's good, over the interests of individuals, agencies or groups."

The new organization will bend its efforts to two ends:

1. The development of an adequate coordinated program of health and welfare services.

2. Efforts to secure adequate funds from both public and private sources for the support of this program.

To qualify for membership in United Community Services, agencies must "perform a service needed in the community of a preventive, remedial or education nature in the field of health and welfare, and must not duplicate the work of any other agency in the field."

If it is a private agency, it must have at least 15 local responsible residents as a board of directors responsible for its operation, must have a stable source of funds, and must audit its books annually.

Community organizations joining UCS must be city-wide in scope, must have been actively concerned with social welfare for at least two years. Where there are federations or associations of such organizations, only the federation or association is to be eligible for membership.

As soon as the organization plan is adopted by the Community Chest and the Council of Social Agencies, steps will be taken to encourage study and understanding of the plan among citizens' organizations, business groups, and other representative District groups.

The plan for UCS was prepared by a joint committee composed of Coleman Jennings, Mrs. Milton King, H. L. Rust, jr., Charles Effinger Smoot and Lee D. Butler, ex officio, for the Chest, and Col. Campbell Johnson, Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, Msgr. John J. Russell, J. C. Turner and Dr. Ernest S. Griffiths, ex officio, for the Council.

This committee prepared a tentative draft of reorganization which was then studied by larger committees from the two organizations.

For the Chest: Charles Effinger Smoot, chairman; Miss Gertrude Bowling, Butler, Mrs. Francis X. Callahan, Miss Mabel Cook, Ray Everett, Dr. Dorothy Ferebee, Edward Flynn, Charles Fyfe, John Ihlder, Frank Jelleff, Jennings, Mrs. King, Edward Rosenblum, Rust, Ralph Van Orsdel, John F. Victory and Mrs. Robert W. Wilson.

For the Council: Edward G. Kemp, chairman; Mrs. Albert Atwood, Miss Bowling, Milo Christiansen, Joseph H. Evans, Dr. Griffiths, Miss Jane M. Hoey, Mrs. Mildred Kilinski, Mrs. C. D. Lowe, Sidney Maslen, Miss Anne McLean, Captain Milliken, Mrs. Radford Moses, Mrs. William W. Parsons, Percy Weinberg, Msgr. Russell and Nathaniel Wilson.

this "possibility is far from being a plan."

Taft said the Untied States can't afford to "give away" to the rest of the world so much that it will have to return to price controls and rationing at home."

Before coming here, Taft arranged conferences with political leaders and editors in Chicago, seeking backing for the Presidential nomination.

These included Illinois Gov. Dwight H. Green, Werner Schroeder, Illinois GOP National Committeeman; Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, and John S. Knight, publisher of the Chicago Daily News.

Taft urged the reelection of Governor Green, who may be the "favorite son" presidential candidate of the State's 56 delegates to the June convention in Philadelphia.

Taft commented that the Illinois situation "is entirely satisfactory to me."

He will tour into Indiana tomorrow for speeches at Gary and Hammond. Thursday he invades politically hostile territory for a major address at St. Paul, Minn., where he will leave to others, he added, any interpretation of differences he may have on that issue with former Gov. Harold E. Stassen, also a GOP presidential aspirant.

In Bloomington, Taft attacked President Truman's proposals for compulsory health insurance and for universal military training.

Reece Sees Communists As 'Real Opposition'

Johnson City, Tenn., Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Republican National Chairman Carroll Reece said today that the Communist Party is the GP's "real opposition" in the 1948 national election.

In an address prepared for a Lincoln Day dinner of the Tri-City Republican Club, he asserted that the Democrats have "demonstrated their inability to combat the communist menace at home or abroad."

"Indeed," he said, "world communism today owes a considerable part of its power to the policies of appeasement and conciliation and alliance followed by our present administration."

Reece, carrying the Republican Lincoln Day assaultation on the Truman administration into his home State, said that for the first time in American history "the very foundation of our philosophy of government has been brought into jeopardy."

The States of Washington, New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania grow more than half of the apples produced in the country.

FISHER
acclaimed as one of the world's foremost reproducing instruments
Fine radio-phonographs, like the Fisher, do not just happen. They are the result of intensive and painstaking research in the arts of electronics and acoustics. Here are but a few of the finer features you get with a Fisher Radio-Phonograph . . .
• Gentle and Swift Record Changers require only a few seconds between sides, resulting in almost continuous music and safe handling of records.
• Full Range FM Receiver Covering 20 to 20,000 Cycles assures peak fidelity performances. You enjoy full brilliance of best broadcasting techniques.
• International Shortwave Reception whose sensitivity of the shortwave section is better than three microvolts. As acute as some communications receivers.
• Professional-Type Tone Control System, Step-type controls for treble and bass, just as those used in broadcast stations, enables one to know exactly how the amplifier is adjusted.
• Powerful, Automatic Volume Control system eliminates fading and brings in all stations, weak and strong, at the same volume.
• Finest Audio Amplifier Ever Made for Home Use, able to reproduce, with equal ease, any frequency from 20 to 20,000 cycles per second (from low organ tone to beyond the upper reaches of human hearing).
• Coordinated Dual Coaxial Speaker System cover the entire span of human hearing with an extremely high frequency reproducer, coaxially mounted.
• Provision for Instant Television Connection has been made for those who may want to augment the sound reproduction of the Fisher wit ha television receiver $1265
Your fisher may be equipped with these special incomparable features at small additional cost.
. . . Dynamic Noise Suppressor, removes unpleasant surface noises, harshness . . . discriminating against record scratch, eliminating turntable rumble . . . Dynamic Volume Expander . . . restores the full dynamic range . . . brings out every subtle undertone, the full characterization of the original performance.

Cold Spell Deepens Coal, Oil Worries

Below-freezing temperatures yesterday pushed up this area's fuel worries on two fronts—coal and oil.

Coal dealers here, faced with a "terrific" demand for fuel, have established their own voluntary program to obtain coal for hardship cases, it was disclosed.

Patrick A. Deck, chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association's coal division, said arrangements have been made to channel genuine hardship cases through the association's offices.

Coal, in tight supply here for weeks, "is coming in every day, but shipments are 10 to 20 per cent below normal," he said. "Consumption is terrific, and the situation will not improve until the weather gets warmer."

In Alexandria, City Manager Nicholas A. Colosanto "earnestly requested" merchants and operators of amusement places, public buildings and clubs to reduce hours of operation "at least 20 per cent" to conserve fuel oil.

A ban on fuel oil to non-essential consumers has been under consideration for Washington, but has been postponed on a day-to-day basis.

Colosanto said he was making the request "in the hope that these business establishments might continue operation but at the same time not draw too heavily on the grossly inadequate supply of fuel."

District Fuel Oil Coordinator J. Thomas Kennedy said yesterday that a barge headed for the Norfolk (Va.) area to pick up a Navy loan of 420,000 gallons of Diesel oil was delayed by a storm in Chesapeake Bay.

"That means it probably will not get here before Friday," he said.

The first of 294,000 gallons of emergency fuel oil scheduled to reach here by pipeline for L. P. Steuart & Bro., hardest hit of local distributors, yesterday came in here.

The oil, part of a 9,500,000 commitment to the Washington-Baltimore area for Petrol Corp., which serves Steuart, is coming from Marcus Hook, Pa., through a pipeline of Sinclair Refining Co., at the rate of 42,000 gallons for seven days.

Placed in operation in 1943, the Sinclair pipeline is the only such line into this area, and is used to carry gasoline, fuel oil and kerosene.

Kennedy said the District's emergency stockpile of oil yesterday was boosted by a set-aside of 40,000 gallons by a major supplier. This brought the emergency pool to about 115,000 gallons late yesterday, plus about 15,000 gallons of kerosene.

At the Bottom of a Slippery Hill . . .

The Washington Post

NO ONE HURT IN FREAK ACCIDENT—This was the scene at the foot of Pierce Mill hill in Rock Creek Park yesterday afternoon. About 3:30 p. m. one auto skidded and flipped over an embankment onto its top. Its occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Sam G. Orfanos and their son, George, of 3130 Wisconsin ave. nw., escaped uninjured. Ten minutes later the other car, driven by Benjamin Krasnick of 5226 Chevy Chase pkwy., skidded down the hill and crashed into the Orfanos car. He also was unhurt. Police said the hill had been sanded, but ice melting during the day had frozen over the sand

A Bit Warmer, Some Clouds Due Today

The local weatherman predicted somewhat cloudy and a bit warmer weather for today, and John Q. Washington hopes his eye was on more than a crystal ball.

Yesterday, the forecaster increased his February batting average to .700 when he slid one off the side of his bat for a safe hit. He had predicted cloudy, cold and clearing. It was much more of the latter two.

An overnight low of 12 degrees in the city and about six in the suburbs was forecast, with today's high about 32 degrees. Yesterday's high was 26, at 3:45 p. m., and low was 12 at 8:04 a. m.

Tomorrow, he said, temperatures will be still higher, but some rain or snow appears likely.

United States Park Police opened Lincoln Memorial Pool to ice skating yesterday and provided floodlighting for night skaters until 11 p. m.

The weatherman here was credited with close calculations in his prediction that a snowstorm expected in southern Virginia would miss Washington.

It did.

But the snow fell in Virginia with a vengeance. The Norfolk area, virtually paralyzed by drifting snow, looked to relief today. The State Highway Department was transferring snow removal equipment to Norfolk, Newport News and Portsmouth to help clear nigh onto impassable streets.

Weatherman scores again

Norfolk traffic was at an almost complete standstill yesterday with snowdrifts up to 5 feet deep. High winds whipped through the Hampton Roads section, left one side of the street naked, the other side impassable. The Weather Bureau recorded a 12-inch fall, ending at 3:30 p. m.

The Chicago Weather Bureau reported a new mass of intensely cold air was developing in south-central Canada and was expected to move into the United States by tonight, ending hopes for any immediate relief from icy weather across the Nation.

Home Rule Backed by Citizens Group

Indorsement in principle, but with specific recommendations for change, of the Auchincloss-Ball home rule bill was voted by the American University Park Citizens Association last night.

This action was taken at the meeting held in Hurst Hall on the American University Campus following submission of a 13-point committtee report.

The group went on record as believing that there should be a companion resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to provide for congressional representation and the right to vote in national elections. However, action on the bill should not be held up merely on this account.

Other recommendations included basing the Federal Government's contribution on the assessed valuation of Federal property, foreign government property, and any other property of a quasi-government nature now exempt.

The report opposed any tax increase to meet possible increases in Government expenditures resulting from the passage of the bill. It favored instead new methods of revenue raising. Further study of salaries of the City Council and Board of Education was also proposed to attract persons of high caliber.

Mount Pleasant

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of District schools, last night called for greater coordination between future housing and school building projects.

Housing developments in the past have gone up, as in the River Terrace area east of the Anacostia River, without regard to limited school facilities, he told more than 60 members of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association.

In many cases, he said at the association's monthly meeting at the Mount Pleasant Branch Library, apartments and moderate home developments have been built in areas lacking sites for future schools.

A "long range" school building program was also urged by Dr. Corning. The solution, he said, is a Federal loan.

Glover Park

Glover Park Citizens Association last night voted to continue its fight against construction of Arizona ave. through the Glover Park sanctuary and to send a committee to present its views to the full House District Committee.

The association asked the District Commission, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and District highway officials to prepare an overall highway and transportation plan before building any new thoroughfares through the Glover Park area.

The group, meeting at Banjamin Stoddard School, also voted to ask the District Commission to restore parking rates in force in 1946 in the District parking lot at the rear of the District Building and named a committee to study home rule proposals.

St. Olaf Choir Shows Usual Expertness

By Paul Hume

The St. Olaf Choir of Northfield, Minn., is a unique choral group.

Their concert last night in Constitution Hall demonstrated once more the technique of impeccable control for which this group has been famous for more than a generation. Two Christiansens, F. Melius, and now his son, Olaf, have given their finest inspiration to this choir. They have no rival in the way they produce the music listed on their programs.

SAFEWAY PASSES ON THE LOW FOOD PRICES TO YOU

Passing on savings to you is nothing new at Safeway. It has been our long-established policy to price every item at the lowest point that will yield a reasonable profit. When market conditions reflect lower costs, Safeway immediately adjusts prices to pass along the savings to you.

In addition to this, Safeway meets every competitor's price on every item of like quality. Safeway's modern streamlined way of doing business trims food costs all along the line and has resulted in lower shelf prices every day in the week.

So you see, no matter how prices are made, Safeway's policy is designed to pass every possible savings on to you every day.

Court Delays U. S. Move Against ITU

Indianapolis, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Government's attempt to get an injunction against the International Typographical Union (AFL) was delayed today at least two weeks.

Federal JPudge Luther M. Swygert said late today he would hand down a ruling sometime after next Monday on the union's motion to dismiss the suit.

He said that if he denies the printers' motion, he will resume hearings one week later on the Government's request for an injunction against alleged ITU violations of the Taft-Hartley law.

Regardless of the judge's ruling on the dismissal question, this test of the Taft-Hartley law seems headed for the Supreme Court.

Attorneys for both sides indicated that in court.

The judge earlier today had refused to permit three publishers' association and the Chicago local of the ITU to enter the suit.

"Complication" Cited

He said that for them to take part in court would "complicate" the issues.

He did, however, permit the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, the Inland Daily Press Association, all publisher croups, and the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organization, the United Mine Workers, International Association of Machinists and the Chicago local of the ITU, to file briefs.

They will do this as friends of the court and not as parties in the suit.

The judge also commented in denying them permission to join the suit that "it would not be in the public interest" to permit them to intervene.

The briefs by the eight groups must be filed by next Monday.

After the judge stated that he had reserved ruling on the case, Government attorneys said they would appeal, regardless of the outcome on the union's dismissal request.

Appeal Planned

Henry Kaiser, an ITU attorney, also said the union planned to appeal if itt lost. He asked the extra week granted to look into appeal grounds.

Following the court's refusal to let the eight groups into the suit, attorney argued over the dismissal, the union charging the Taft-Hartley law is unconstitutional and that the National Labor Relations Board had no right to file as it did.

Union attorneys contended that section 10 (J) of the new law makes the court subservient to the National Labor Relations Board.

They also claimed that the regional director who filed the suit against the union had no authority to act, that the board itself should have passed on the matter.

The National Labor Relations Board attorneys argued that the court still had the power to rule on the "only" question before it and that the unconstitutionality argument was "frivolous."

Mike Reilly at Tehran

U. S. Army Photo

Reilly, Guard of Presidents, On Book Luncheon Program

The man who gained public recognition after he left the White House will be back in Washington on February 18 to enjoy a bit of it.

Michael F. Reilly, author, will share center stage in his own right at Hotel Statler at The Washington Post's Book and Author Luncheon then. As Mike Reilly, head of the White House Secret Servcie, he appeared anonymously in newspapers as the many you didn't see for looking at his late chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Practically always at the elbow of "the boss" whether Roosevelt was being photoflashed with Stalin, Churchill, any Royal Highness, or merely riding through cheering crowds, Mike Reilly's face was generally within camera range. Caption writers seldom bothered to identify him.

What he saw and observed as chief bodyguard, however, provided him the material for his scarcely anonymous book "Reilly of the White House," which he will discuss at the luncheon.

After the President's death, Reilly retired, and felt free to tell the whole story. Issued first in the Saturday Evening Post as "I Guarded FDR" and later published in book form as "Reilly of the White House," he told of outwitting crackpots, foiling German parachutists, and handling well-meaning politicians whose senses of security were blinded by publicity desires.

Other speakers at the February 18 luncheon will be Charles Hurd, author of "Washington Cavalcade"; Agnes Sligh Turnbull, whose recent book, "The Bishop's Mantle," is a best seller, and James Warner Bellah, whose new book is "The Irregular Gentleman."

Tickets are on sale at book and department stores.

Keenan Named to Set Up AFL Political Unit

By The Associated Press

Joseph D. Keenan was named yesterday to set up the AFL's League for Political Education "as a powerful force in the 1948 campaign."

Keenan, 51, is secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor. During the war he was vice chairman of the War Production Board. He has been a labor adviser to the American Military Government in Germany.

He was picked by National Chairman William Green and Secretary-Treasurer George Meany as assistant to the executive officers of the league to carry on the work of organization.

This is separate from the post of league director. This job remains to be filled.

Green and Meany also announced:

1. An appeal to all affiliated unions to start a drive for voluntary contributions of $1 or more to finance the league's activities—to be directed mainly at helping opponents of the Taft-Hartley Act.

2. National headquarters of the league will be opened March 1 near the White House. The CIO and the CIO Political Action Committee, also fighting Taft-Hartley law advocates, already are located close to the executive mansion.

3. A call for a national conference in Washington March 10 of State Federation of Labor presidents to perfect teamwork with the AFL political arm.

Officials Tour 6 Boys Clubs In Fund Drive

Metropolitan Police Boys Club officials made a whirlwind inspection of six clubs yesterday in their campaign to raise $125,000.

The funds are essential to continuing and expanding activities for the 13,000 members, John A. Remon, president, reported. Particularly needed, he said, is a new club at 6th st., between H and I sts. sw., to accommodate thousands of youths in that area.

With Remon on the tour were Max Farrington, executive secretary; Leonard Walsh, building committee chairman, and Lieut. Forrest L. Binswanger, director.

To date, $91,800 has been contributed.

Truman Order On GSI Denied

reiterated GSI's position that it will not bargain with Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO), until certain conditions are met. He said non-Communist affidavits must also be filed by the parent union, United Public Workers of America, and the local must win an NLRB election among the workers GSI has hired to replace the strikers.

Strikers Jam Hearing

About 40 strikers jammed into the hearing room. At one point, Hoffman suggested they might get their "friends" who stayed on the job to vote for Local 471 if an NLRB election were held.

"We have no friends at GSI," shouted a woman striker from the rear. "They're all scabs. We are all GSI employes."

Hoffman said he thought that if GSI did not intend to take the strikers back, "then they ought to know about it."

"I don't want these people standing around hoping they'll get their jobs back. I understand from General Fleming that even the President cannot force GSI to bargain."

West End Citizens' Association last night amended its constitution to provide for "screening" of applicants for membership and then voted a month's wait following proposal of future amendments before acting on them.

A three-man committee was chosen to "investigate all applicants" to determine whether they are members of any group deemed subversive by the Government. Committee members are Walter F. Wasson, association president; Lester E. Steinem, and John H. Ticer. The meeting was at Precinct Three police station, 2014 K st. nw.

Natural Gas Carrying Facilities Increased

The Federal Power Commission announced yesterday that during the last six months of 1947 it authorized increased natural gas pipeline facilities capable of carrying an additional 1,262,200,000 cubic feet daily.

The estimated cost of the facilities was $303,218,392, including the purchase price of the "Big Inch" and "Little Inch" war emergency oil pipelines acquired by the Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. for natural gas transmission operations.

Group Asks Court For Loyalty Ruling

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

One group branded "subversive" by Attorney General Tom C. Clark fought back yesterday, asking the District Court to hold Clark's action unconstitutional.

Williamson

This was the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, which acted to put the validity of President Truman's whole loyalty program upon a special three-judge Federal Court. From there, the question could be taken to the Supreme Court.

Meanwhile:

1. FBI agents in New York picked up John Williamson—the Communist Party labor secretary—on a deportation warrant.

"Hounding" Assailed

2. Arthur Garfield Hayes—noted liberal lawyer—told the House Un-American Affairs Committee there was no danger to the country from the Communists, but that there was much danger in hounding them, because blows aimed at the Comunists struck the civil rights of all Americans.

3. The District Women's Bar Association and the American Veterans of World War II joined the groups backing laws to clamp down on Communists.

O. John Rogge, former prosecutor, filed the suit here for the anti-Fascist committee. He told the court the committee was a charitable ageney, which in three years raised a million and a quarter dollars to aid victims of fascism. Last December, the suit said, the committee was officially branded subversive, without notice that it was under investigation and without having a chance to defend itself at a hearing.

Effects Cited

This was a heavy blow to the committee's work, the suit said, by costing it tax exempt status, scaring off its backers and friends and in many other ways making its officers less able to do their jobs.

The Attorney General drew up his subversive list—of more than 80 groups—on orders from the President. The committee's suit said both Clark's list and the President's order were against the Constitution, in that without a hearing, the committee and its members were stripped of their rights of free speech and press, and were denied due process of law.

Hearing Demanded

The committee asked the court to order Clark to take its name off the subversive list at once, and for a hearing before three Federal judges who could make him keep it off.

Last year the committee's officers refused to open their books to the Un-American Affairs Committee, saying that to do so would expose some of those it had helped in persecution by their Fascist enemies. For the refusal, a dozen of the officers were fined and sentenced to jail, for contempt of the House.

The Justice Department called Williamson the biggest Communist figure arrested up to now. About 20 minor Communists have been apprehended in recent months, and are due to be deported. Williamson joined these at Ellis Island, where he was held without bond.

The department said Williamson has been posing as an American citizen for many years, but that he really was born in Scotland. He was said to claim he was born in San Francisco, and that his birth records were lost in the earthquake and fire there 42 years ago.

Called Red Since Youth

Wherever he was born, Williamson was said to have been an active Communist since 1918, when he was a 15-year-old in Seattle. The department said its files showed he belonged to the Socialist Labor Party, to the Young Workers League, the Young Communist League—in which he was national secretary—and that he came to New York seven years ago as an aide to William Z. Foster, the Communist general chairman.

Attorney Hays told the un-American Committee that to outlaw the Communists, or bar them from public office, would be to surrender American democracy to the principles of totalitarian states. Hitler and Mussolini rose to power—Hays reminded the committee—by dreaming up a red scare and then taking away the liberties of the people in order to save them from it.

Byrnes Has Movie Case In High Court

Former Supreme Court Justice James F. Byrne went before the bar of the court yesterday for the first time since he left the bench in 1942.

Byrnes was counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox, one of the five big movie producers ordered to sell its string of theaters.

Attorney General Tom C. Clark told the court the high price of movie tickets was due to a conspiracy of big producers to dominate the industry. Byrnes challenged this, telling the court there was no proof the producers gouged the public at the box office, or that a new setup in the industry would bring lower prices.

Byrnes said, too, there was no proof that big company control has cut down the number of films or limited their subject matter.

The movie antitrust suit began in 1938, dragged on until 1946. Then a New York court ruled for the Government, but the decree did not satisfy either side and both brought the case to the Supreme Court.

Attorney Joseph M. Proskauer, representing Warner Brothers, told the court that "complete collapse" of the movie industry would result if the producing companies were forced to dispose of their theaters.

"Without a backlog of these showcase theaters no company could risk producing pictures costing several million dollars," he said. "It's the backlog of first-run theaters in first-run cities that provides continuity of flow of a successful product."

United Artists Corp., another defendant, protested that the lower cost decree "does nothing but give a lot of fellows a chance to begin law suits."

Edward C. Raftery, United Artists attorney, told the justices: "The flood gates are open. Under this decree the entire production and distribution side of the motion picture industry is doomed to destruction, as no industry can survive the flood of damage suits that theater operators have begun and are bound to institute."

Coup Feared in Costa Rica As Government Defeat Looms

San Jose, Costa Rica, Feb. 10 (AP). Political unrest mounted tonight in the capital of this Central American republic in the wake of Sunday's presidential election.

Rumors of a coup d'etat were heard. There were reports that the government, whose candidate has conceded defeat, would declare the election void. Congressmen were being flown to San Jose for a special session tomorrow.

A fire apparently set by terrorists destroyed thousands of ballots which had been placed under police guard.

Otilio Ulate Blanco of the Union Nacional, an anti-government party, maintained a slim lead over the government-supported candidate, Rafael Angel Calderon Guardia. The latter conceded defeat but has charged fraud.

Rene Picado, minister of defense and public security, told the Associated Press, he has a plane ready with 48 seats to carry leading supporters of Ulate into exile if a coup occurs.

Burleith

The Auchincloss bill for home rule in the District was unanimously indorsed in principle last night by the Burleith Citizens Association.

However, the motion passed by the association said this indorsement was contingent on a referendum being held in Washington to determine if the majority of the citizens favor the bill.

Partitioning Of Palestine Held Illegal

Lake Success, Feb. 10 (AP).—The ranking spokesman here for Arab countries today challenged the United Nations Palestine partition plan on two new counts.

Faris El Khoury, of Syria, thus began in the Security Council the Arab battle against an international police force for Palestine. He contended that:

1. The five-member partition commission was not legally created by the U. N. Assembly last November because its members were not elected by a secret ballot.

2. The Assembly recommended to all 57 nations the adoption of the plan to create Jewish and Arabic countries in the Holy Land but that no U. N. members so far have adopted the plan under their various constitutions.

El Khoury spoke when the council took up the commission's first monthly report. The delegates decided they would delay debate until they receive a special report from the commission.

40 Visiting U. S. Jews Will Be Well Guarded

Jerusalem, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Jewish fighters in Tel Aviv prepared elaborate protection for a visiting group of 40 U. S. Jewish leaders today, as nine Arabs were slain and six wounded by Jewish forces elsewhere in the Holy Land.

The American party was scheduled to arrive tonight at Lydda airport. Leaders of the Hagana "defense army" said they would be driven to Tel Aviv in a convoy of armored cars.

The Americans plan to go on to Jerusalem in a day or two but the Hagana commander said a security blackout would be placed on their movements.

2 of Same Name Face Surprised Judge in a Day

First the court clerk called the name of James H. Copeland—housebreaking.

Then, after more cases: "James F. Copeland—grand larceny."

Judge George D. Neilson did a quick double take. Two James Copelands in one day was stretching coincidence to the breaking point.

James H., 26, of 620 N st. nw., was held in $1000 bond for action of the grand jury. The hearing of James F., 32, of 803 4th st. sw., was continued until February 24 and he was held in $5000 bond.

Police said James H. broke into the Lucky Strike bowling alleys, 1731 14th st. nw., where he formerly was employed as a pinboy, Sunday and looted the refreshment stand.

James F. is charged with grand larceny in connection with the theft of $2200 and $800 in jewelry from a strong box at the home of Joseph Cooperman, 492 G st. sw.

Bharatpur Linked To Extremists in Gandhi Investigation

New Delhi, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Indian government took over administration of a second princely state today in its investigation of the assassination of Mohandas Gandhi.

An announcement said the Maharajah of Bharatpur had been personally confronted with "prima facie evidence of complicity of the Bharatpur administration" in activities of the RSSS, outlawed Hindu National Volunteer Corps.

Bharatpur adjoins on the east the princely state of Alwar, whose administration was taken over Saturday for the same reasons.

At 3 a. m. tomorrow the funeral urn, containing the ashes of Gandhi will be moved by motor car from the Birla mansion and placed aboard the special train that will carry it to Allahabad.

Perhaps one million persons will witness the immersing of the ashes in the confluence of the Ganges, Jumma and Saraswati Rivers on Thursday at Triveni Sangham.

The funeral party will travel on a train made up of third-class coaches such as Gandhi used in his lifetime when he went on a train journey. Members of the party will ride on wooden benches and eat only vegetables during the 27-hour trip.

Horse-mounted lancers and infantry will escort the urn on the 4-mile march from Allahabad station to Triveni Sangham.

Devadas, son of Gandhi, will row to a shallow spot in the middle of the river. He will immerse himself and commit the ashes to the water.

Bits of the ashes have been distributed to all provinces, and similar rites will be performed at the same time all over India.

Bill Would Let All D. C. Hospitals Get U. S. Grants

Extension of public benefits to all private hospitals in Washington is asked in a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.).

Dirksen, chairman of the House District Committee, said the bill would amend the Hospital Center Act and would replace a similar provision which was struck out of the legislation during House debate.

It would extend to private hospitals, not included in the new hospital center to be built on Naval Observatory grounds, the help of public grants in renovating, repairing or rebuilding their activities. Hospitals in the center are Emergency, Garfield and Episcopal. Specific appropriations for such hospital projects would have to be made by Congress if the Dirksen amendment passes.

Truman to Attend

Memorial Set Today For Gandhi

Jackson Grady

President Truman and his cabinet are scheduled to attend public memorial services for Mahatma Gandhi today at 4 p. m. in the Departmental Auditorium, 13th st. and Constitution ave.

Speakers at the services, sponsored by the Embassy of India, will include M. Asaf Ali, Ambassador of India; the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, director of the Community Church in New York City; Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post; Mrs. Mary M. Bethune, founder of the National Council of Negro Women, and Senators Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) and Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.).

The program will be opened with a hymn song by three Indian women, followed by the reading of scriptures by Indian representatives of the Hindu, Mohammedan, Christian, Sikh, Parsi and Jewish faiths.

Similar memorial meetings will be held at the same hour throughout the United States, Canada, Trinidad, Panama and British Guiana, the Embassy of India announced.

Mahatma Gandhi, Hindu leader, was killed by an assassin on January 30 at New Delhi.

Top Penalty Asked for Jap Ex-Premier

Tokyo (Wednesday), Feb. 11 (U.P.). The prosecution today asked the international war crimes tribunal to order the "sternest penalty knowtn to the law" for former Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo and 24 other men accused of leading the Japanese war of conquest.

Chief Allied Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan summed up nearly two years of prosecution evidence by describing the defendants' acts as "vile" and charging that they had "no consideration for the dignity of the human being."

Keenan asserted that the 25 accused leaders had had the fairest possible trial, in conformity with historic precedents, and added that the proceedings of the international tribunal would stand as an "example for the entire world."

Kennan quoted from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the Potsdam declaration, Pope Pius XII and the writings of Thomas Paine to show that Japanese aggression was a defiance of ample warning from the rest of the world.

The prosecutor said the court had "shown great patience in permitting vituperative and insolent comments" about a note sent to Japan before Pearl Harbor by former United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Presentation of evidence ended yesterday. The defense immediately filed motions calling for dismissal and challenging MacArthur's authority to set up the tribunal. Both motions were rejected by the court.

Kalorama

The Kalorama Citizens Association, meeting last night at the John Quincy Adams School, 19th and California sts. nw., reaffirmed its approval of President Truman's Civil Rights Program by a 34-32 vote.

It was the second time the association has voted approval of the program. The first was last November.

Gets 5 Years in Dope Trafficking

A Washington man drew a five-year sentence in the United States District Court for Eastern New York yesterday on a charge of trafficking in narcotics.

The Treasury Department here identified him as Lawrence W. Peden and said he was believed to be one of the principal sources of supply for dope dealers and addicts in the Washington area.

The Treasury Department said Peden was arrested last September as he was boarding a plane for Washington at La Guardia Field, New York. The Treasury said he had in his possession three grains of pure heroin.

"averaged 4 replies a day to my Post 'apartment wanted' ad"

• "Of course we were pretty anxious to find an apartment after six months in one room," says Mrs. Thomas J. Brown, employed at the National Institute of Government Purchasing, "Yet we didn't want just any apartment. For one thing, we hoped to find a place near Union Station, because my husband commutes every day to Baltimore. So we inserted an ad in The Washington Post and let it run for nine days. We really got outstanding results; we averaged four offers a day, checked several of them, and finally found exactly the right apartment. Thank you so much."

New Agency Voted For European Aid

retary of State shall keep each other fully and currently informed on matters, including proposed action, arising within the scope of their respective duties which are pertinent to the duties of the other under this act.

"Whenever the Secretary of State believes that any proposed action or failure to act on the part of the Administrator is inconsistent with the foreign policy objectives of the United States, he shall consult with the Administrator and, if differences of view are not adjusted by consultation, the matter shall be referred to the President for final decision."

Altogether the proposed arrangement is expected to satisfy many Republicans in Congress who disliked giving the State Department an outright veto over the new recovery agency.

Continuing objections from the House side, however, were indicated yesterday by Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), chief author of an alternative bill to set up a corporate form of administration. Herter told a press conference that his objections had strong support in the House.

Herter headed an influential House committee which made a study of European economic problems last summer. His statement yesterday broke a silence of many weeks, and indicated points on which the House and Senate might disagree in the coming weeks of drafting and debating an ERP bill.

He proposed that the new recovery agency should administer American aid to China and occupied areas as well as western Europe.

He also suggested that about one-third of all its outlays be in the form of loans rather than gifts; the State Department recently estimated the proportion at between 20 and 40 per cent. Herter would have the loans made by the Export-Import Bank, with Congress making added funds available to the bank instead of appropriating funds for a new ERP agency.

Cut in Funds Seen

This appeared to be a device to cut down the amount of the appropriation needed for the next fiscal year. Herter added, however, that if a proposed loan failed to meet the present lending standards of the Export-Import Bank, and if it did not seem to be a sound banking proposition, it would be better if the Administrator provided the money as an outright gift.

Herter outlined other points likely to cause Senate-House controversy. Among them were (1) that the Department of Commerce surrender its present export-control powers to the new agency, and (2) that the United States should take tile to whatever local currencies the European countries set aside in payment for American gifts.

But he also seemed to agree with some of the Senate committee's decisions yesterday and with the Administration's proposals. He thought it possible that the House, as well might meet the April 1 deadline set by Secretary Marshall if there were not too great a spread between the House and Senate bills.

For Republican Support

All this seemed to show that Herter was seeking a bill which would get the greatest possible Republican support.

Republican hopes for victory in November might be scuttled, Senator Clyde Reed (R., Kan.) wrote a constituent yesterday, if the European Recovery Program fell through and if "President Truman could hang the responsibility on the Republican Party." Reed wrote that he was no enthusiast for ERP; he has been one of 20 Republican Senators who have been holding private meetings to try to modify the program.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday heard the E. R. P. supported by spokesmen for the League of Women Voters, the National Women's Trade Union League and the Amreican Association of University Women. It also listened to Lewis H. Brown, chairman of the board of the John-Manville Corp., who previously had appeared before the Senate.

Henry A. Wallace asked permission to testify before the House committee Monday, but Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) said he would have to wait until February 18, the first available time on the committee's schedule. After February 18, Herter will call witnesses in support of his alternative bill, including Randolph Burgess of the National City Bank of New York, Allen W. Dulles, Professor Edward S. Mason of Harvard and many others.

Queens' Treasure Hunt

Yesterday was lost-and-found day for the Louisana queens in town for today's Mardi Gras of the Louisiana State Society at the Washington Hotel.

Here's what happened, according to the Associated Press:

First, Miss Elsie Winter, of Lake Charles, Louisiana Yam Queen, reported her wallet gone. After much excitement it turned up in her hotel room.

Next, Miss Gloria Landry, of Buras, Orange Queen, missed a bracelet and Miss Marie Aliscia Toso, of Crowley, Rice Queen, found she had lost a valuable diamond ring. Consternation reigned.

Then a Capitol guard recovered the bracelet in the dining room where the queens were luncheon guests of the Louisiana congressional delegation and next Miss Toso found her ring again.

So the queens broke even in the end.

Korean Riots Laid to Reds

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 10 (AP).—The U. S. commander in south Korea blamed Korean Communists today for three days of "murder and destruction" which took 49 lives and sabotaged railways and communications.

Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge declared in a statement the rioting was an attempt to force the United Nations Commission on Korea to leave. Russia has refused to cooperate with the commission.

Hodge said the rioting was led "by a few hundred stooges" undoubtedly paid by Korean currency seized in the northern zone occupied by Russia. The riots began Saturday.

The rioting seemed to have spent its fury and all was reported quiet in the American zone today.

The commission will refer the question of independent elections for Korea back to the U. N. Little Assembly this month.

Gen. Matheny

U. S. Bomber Expert to Go To Greece

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force yesterday ordered Brig. Gen. William A. Matheny, wartime Pacific bomber commander tand a tactical expert, to duty with the American mission in Greece.

At the same, the USAF's top specialist in Artic operations—Brig. Gen. Dale V. Gaffney—was assigned duty in Alaska. Four other Air Force generals also were detailed to new posts here.

Matheny's assignment followed that of Maj. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, outstanding ground force tactician, to serve as strategic and tactical advisor to the Greek Army in its operations against Communist guerillas.

Nominated for Promotion

The latter's nomination to be a lieutenant general will make him the ranking American military man in Greece.

Matheny, a native of North Dakota, has been deputy commander of the 12th Air Force at Riverside, Calif. He is a recent graduate of the National War College here.

General Gaffney, a former National Guard private, has seen much service in Far North. He served in Alaska throughout the last war, and has been special assistant for Arctic affairs at USAF Headquarters since October.

Other Transfers

The other transfers:

Maj. Gen. Otto Paul Weyland, now director of plans and operations at Air Force Headquarters, to be deputy commandant of the National War College.

Maj. Gen. Samuel E. Anderson, member of the joint strategic survey committee of the joint Chiefs of Staff, to succeed Weyland at headquarters.

Brig. Gen. Truman H. Landon, whom Weyland will relieve at the War College, will take over Anderson's job with the joint chiefs.

Brig. Gen. Edwin B. Lyon, now director of administrative services at headquarters, becomes president of Air Force Secretary Symington's personnel board.

U. S. Potatoes To Aid French Price War

Paris, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—The government announced today that it will import foreign vegetables, including 35,000 tons of American potatoes, in an effort to halt a spiral in food prices, some of which have jumped 70 per cent since January 1.

The potatoes will be sold for about seven cents for two pounds, cheaper than the retail price in some parts of the United States.

Secretary of State for Information Pierre Abelin said the government will introduce laws into the National Assembly to control runaway prices. He promised that abuses by profiteers would be severely punished.

Housewives, some of whom already budget 80 per cent of their money for food, have seen these increases in recent weeks: meat 12 per cent; wine, 41 per cent; lettuce, 50 per cent; oranges, 41 per cent, and carrots, 72 per cent.

Yvon Coude de Foresto, secretary of State for agriculture, opening the Government offensive, ordered wholesale meat prices frozen at the level existing at the last of January, before the upward trend set in. Prices will remain frozen until June.

Coude de Foresto also ordered resumption of the double price tags system under which retailers must post wholesale prices along with their selling figures.

Mountain Artillery Used in Pre-Dawn Attack on Port City

Salonika, Greece, Feb. 10 (AP).—Guerillas shelled the heart of this major port city before dawn today and killed four persons, an official announcement said.

The attackers, described as a strong force, sent 12 montain artillery shells into the city in slightly more than an hour.

One shell exploded in a British billet, killing one British soldier and wounding two others. The other dead included a man and two women. Nine civilians were wounded.

Salonika, a port of 100,000 population, had been attacked previously with mortar shells.

The guerillas moved eastward toward the Chalcidice Peninsula after the attack. Greek army airforce planes spotted them and inflicted heavy casualties with bombs, rockets and machinegun fire, the official statement said.

One of the shells hit near the Mediterranean Hotel, headquarters of the United Nations Special Commission on the Balkans.

Campbell Soup Workers Seek 30 c Pay Boost

Camden, N. J., Feb. 10 (AP).—A 30-cent-an-hour wage increase for Campbell Soup Co. workers in Camden, N. J., and Chicago was asked today.

Vice President J. M. Hoerle said the negotiations between his company and representatives for Local 80 and Local 194 of the CIO Food, Tobacco, Agricultural and Allied Workers will be resumed next Tuesday at the Campbell plant in Chicago.

"We did not reach an agreement in our meeting today," he said.

Lamont Will Leaves 10 Millions to Public

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Thomas W. Lamont, the financier, willed approximately 10 million dollars to charitable and educational institutions, including five million dollars to Harvard University.

The residue of the estate was left in trust for the widow, Mrs. Florence C. Lamont. The total was not estimated.

Riot in Naples Flares as Reds' Order Strike

Rome, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Unemployed rioters clashed with police in the streets of Naples today, as the Communist-led Italian Federation of Labor (CGIL) ordered a general strike in Puglia Province to protest a bloody anti-leftist riot there yesterday.

About 5000 unemployed Italians swarmed through the central squares of the great south Italian port today, stopping streetcars and throwing road blocks across thoroughfares.

Police jeeps charged the crowds and several persons were reported injured.

The Puglia general strike will affect 59 communities in the "boot heel" province, including Foggia, a city of 62,000 population. It was called for midnight.

Four persons were killed outright in the political gunfight yesterday, and a fifth died in a hospital today of injuries suffered in the fighting. The Interior Ministry announced that 24 political extremists had been arrested for taking part in the riot.

Indian Woman's Title To Acreage Backed

By The Associated Press

Mabel Townsend Pretty On Top, of Lodge Grass, Mont., may get to sell 160 acres of her land after all.

A House subcommittee yesterday approved a Senate-passed bill giving her clear title to the land.

William Zimmerman, jr., assistant Indian commissioner, told the committee the land should remain in Indian ownership. The committee amended the bill to give the Indian Bureau or an Indian 90 days after the measure becomes law to buy the land.

Hosiery Workers Oppose Third Party

Philadelphia, Feb. 10 (AP).—The national executive board of the CIO-American Federation of Hosiery Workers said today it opposed formation of a third party.

The union, in a resolution, said, "A third party would serve only to split and divide the forces of progress at the very moment when unity is our greatest need and political activity of labor must be conducted on an independent and nonpartisan basis, giving support to the progressive forces in both major parties."

Yes, we said "two-step"! In our modern society, you can't afford to be a "back number." VIRGINIA DARE AMERICAN WINE

GARRETT & COMPANY, INC., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

IT'S plenty tough for the top man on the salary totem pole to make ends meet these days, with food, rent and clothing prices skyrocketing.

What about the low man then—representing an important segment of America's railroad workers—whose income has increased less than 45% since 1936, while in the same period, the wages of other groups have more than doubled. Here, in the order pictured on the totem pole, is the percentage increase in wages of eight major categories of workers since 1936:

Lumber and Millwork	143.7%
Iron and Steel Workers	133.9%
Foundry Workers	118.5%
Meat Packing Workers	107.6%
Electrical Manufacturing	107.0%
Automobile Workers	101.9%
Newspaper and Magazine Printers	100.3%
RAILROAD ENGINEERS, FIREMEN, HELPERS, & SWITCHMEN	44.7%

Now the low man has asked for a 30% increase. That still won't be as much as some of the others have had, but it should help him to get by. He wants to be reasonable, but he and his family want to eat, too. After all, you take quite a squeeze when you've been low man on the totem pole as long as the railroaders have.

Incognito Government

It should occasion small surprise that, as The Washington Post Poll revealed on Monday, Chief Commissioner J. Russell Young is the man nearly half the residents of Washington don't know. The Post pollers in their inquisitive way went about asking folks if they could identify in terms of their official positions certain prominent persons in the District. In the case of Mr. Young, 45 per cent of the respondents failed dismally. Robert J. Barrett fared better; only 38 per cent were unable to recall that not long ago our unknown Commissioners chose him to be police superintendent. A full 70 per cent, however, were unable to identify Clement Murphy as fire chief despite all the wonderful free publicity he has had just recently.

While there are no comparable figures at hand respecting the public officials of Boston, New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore, it is beyond credibility that they are not better known than this. Very few New Yorkers, we surmise, would have the slightest difficulty in designating William O'Dwyer as the mayor of their municipality. There is an easy reason for this, of course. Mr. O'Dwyer and the officials of the other communities mentioned have devoted a great deal of time and effort to making themselves known to the citizens they serve; they could never have won their jobs in any other way. In Washington, on the other hand . . .

And there is another reason, perhaps slightly more subtle. What doth it profit a man to learn the name of a District Commissioner when there is nothing he can do about that Commissioner's tenure—when, in short, he has no opportunity to mark a cross alongside that name on a ballot or, remembering it, to mark a cross alongside the name of a competing candidate? Frustration is a great breeder of indifference. The people of Washington are likely to take real interest in their local government only when they are endowed with a real measure of control over its composition and character.

On Changing Names

Much has been written recently about the ethics of changing one's name, either for purposes of pure euphony, as in the case of actors and writers, or to provide a sort of protective coloration in a society still infested, alas, with many archaic prejudices. Is a man, for example, whose surname is Mischa Magronski, justified in changing it to Malcolm Macgregor, in the hope that it will simplify his relationships with his neighbors, and, incidentally, spare him the necessity of spelling it out for every sales clerk? Have those to whom the name Macgregor has been hereditary for some generations any right to object to this preemption?

Such a question, we remember, came up a good many years ago in Boston, where a saloonkeeper named Kabotschnik petitioned the courts for permission to abbreviate his name to Cabot. Certain members of the Cabot family protested; but, if we are not mistaken, the protests were disallowed by the judge, who, in granting the petition, observed that the name Cabot itself had been altered from the original Caboto, which indeed was the version employed by the most distinguished Cabot of them all.

The fact is that the great majority of surnames now in use have undergone some modification in the course of generations. In most cases where the name is of foreign origin the change has been forced by difficulties of pronunciation. Sometimes the process is merely to confer upon the stranger some familiar name roughly approximating the sound of the original. This process is known in philology as the law of Hobson-Jobson, which is said to have been the interpretation given by the British soldiers in India to the pious Moslem ejaculation, "Ya Hassan, ya Houssan!"

Oftener, however, an appellation, originating as a mere nickname, may be forced on the members of a family. Thus, for example, names such as "French," "Scott," "Flemming," and so on appear to derive from some immigrant ancestor. The name "Walsh," so familiar in Ireland and in the United States, is of course cognate with "Welsh," and in many cases takes the same pronunciation. It is not, therefore, really an Irish name, but neither are many other names that are thought of as distinctively Irish, such as "Burke," "Lynch," "Tracy," "Joyce," "Fitzgerald," and so on. And for that matter names like "Murphy," "Kelly," "Sweeney," and so on are crude and artificial Anglicizations of the Gaelic names that were forbidden by the penal laws.

The question is whether it is fair for a man to do for himself and his family what will probably be done for them by others, with or without their consent. In certain instances, as for example in the case of Polish and Bohemian names, changes seem almost obligatory. After more than 200 years not one American in a hundred is able to manage the pronunciation of Kosciusko, and except for the world catastrophe that has burned it into our memories, probably none of us would have mastered Mikolajczyk—if indeed we have mastered it. And there are some names which seem almost a condemnation to lifelong mediocrity. It seems altogether improbable that a girl named Mabel Shultz, no matter how beautiful and talented, could stay very long in Hollywood without perceiving the wisdom of calling herself Maeve O'Morny or Veronica Green.

Tu Quoque

The Kremlin's rejoinder to the State Department issue of the Nazi documents on the Nazi-Soviet pact of 1939 might have been expected. There is plenty of dirt to go around in the diplomatic prelude of the second World War. What Moscow offers in this first blast is merely a set of charges preliminary to publication of its own documents substantiating those charges. Undeniably "a golden rain of American dollars" fertilized Hitler's war industry, and it is likewise true that Britain and France appeased Hitler by throwing Czechoslovakia to the wolves. There is a difference only in degree in the prewar story of diplomatic mendacity. But, as a correspondent pointed out the other day on this page, not one of the men who participated in these diplomatic deals is now in office in Paris or London, whereas the same men who signed the pact with Hitler are still presiding over the destinies of Soviet Russia.

It is impossible as yet to piece together all the diplomatic history that preceded war. Certainly the forthcoming Moscow papers will not be comprehensive. They will doubtless omit the negotiations that the British undertook with the Russians after Munich. So far as is now known, Stalin initiated them, out of a fear produced by the Munich pact (which lasted through the "phony" period of the war) that Britain and Germany would wind up in alliance against Soviet Russia. Moscow, after ditching Litvinov for the collapse of collective security, was then pursuing what was called a "preventive encirclement strategy." Britain added to the Kremlin's fears by sending to Moscow a low-ranking Foreign Office official as head of the British delegation—an official who later became Sir William Strang, at present postwar ambassador to Berlin. No agreement was achieved, for Stalin asked for the same freedom of action in acquiring peripheral territory in the Balkans and the Baltic that he later got from Hitler.

That the British will publish these documents is a prospect that is brought nearer by the promised publication of Soviet documents. Hitherto the British have refused. Indeed, according to Mr. Bevin, they were not party to the State Department's issuance of the papers on the Nazi-Soviet pact, despite statements to the contrary in Washington. The implication of Mr. Bevin's comments was that they would have declined if their permission had been requested. Now, in the light of the Moscow blast, we know why. However, their hand may now be forced, and, with all the documents at his disposal, the historian will then be enabled to assemble a fairly true record of a discreditable period.

Drift And Defeatism

Confusion never was more evident in the conduct of foreign affairs than at the present moment. The Marshall Plan, Korea, Greece, Palestine—policy toward all four has become inchoate. Drift and defeatism have taken the place of the "vision and courage" that Senator Vandenberg bespoke on the heels of Secretary Marshall's initiative last June.

True, there has been a decision on Palestine, but as if aghast at the temerity, the Truman Administration is trying to run away from it. The same self-incapacitation afflicted the British government in 1937. Partition between Jew and Arab had been recommended by the Peel Commission, accepted in principle by the British government, yet nothing was done by way of enforcement. Mr. Churchill, writing on the subject that year, was not then in favor of partition. However, he wrote, "Even this scheme, had it been put into force vigorously and promptly, would have been better than the hopeless indecision which followed. His Majesty's government showed themselves unable to make up their minds." For more than 10 years Whitehall remained in more or less the same paralysis.

Britain's palsy of a decade ago is now matched by American palsy. One writer after another is telling the world that the Administration is so lukewarm about partition—a partition which this time is to be accompanied by economic union, a partition which has back of it the recommendation of the General Assembly—that a retreat is under discussion. No wonder the Arab Higher Committee in Palestine has warned the United Nations that it will fight. The more things change the more they remain the same.

The future governance of what Mr. Churchill called the "joint estate" of Arab and Jew will not be settled by procrastination. It can only be settled by decision, and the time lost since November 30, the date of the U. N. recommendation, has itself made a task which was difficult in any case infinitely more so. Nobody has suggested that partition—being a compromise between extremes—is ideal. But as Mr. Churchill said 10 years ago, what is worse than anything is indecision, and partition with economic union, if given a chance to work, if backed by all the powers of enforcement (including conciliation) that the U. N. can command, has all the elements of Palestine pacification, meaning a state looking to a binational unitary setup.

In the danger spots of Greece and Korea the difficulties in going forward are, to be sure Sisyphean. The wrecking tactics of the Soviet Union have now extended to southern Korea, and strikes and riots and sabotage are bedeviling the American administration. In Greece, all that the Soviet needs to do to maintain ferment and oppose progress in reviving the country is to keep its little finger raised in sight of its Balkan minions. In both countries, moreover, the task that the United States has undertaken is complicated by the ineptitude of the local leadership.

In Korea, where in the northern zone the Soviet Union refuses entry to the U. N. Electoral Commission, the time must come, unless the ERP works, when we shall have to cut our losses, and risk the sacrifice of "face." The case is different in Greece. In that country, the defense of which was undertaken as an answer to Soviet aggression, much more is at stake than prestige. The national security is clearly involved. Yet the administration of the American interest in Greece has been indecisive. The duality of our representation, the qualms about intervention—these have handicapped our purpose of providing those conditions which would not only sustain Greek independence but also encourage the emergence of a truly representative Greek government.

It is clear, we think, that the burden of international decisions is so great that this country cannot shoulder them alone. The trouble is that the nations which could be of help are now convalescing from war's ravages. It was to speed their recovery that Mr. Marshall initiated ERP. Nothing could be more urgent in a world sliding downhill like the Gadarene swine than the Marshall program, yet the suggestion has been made that, after a skeleton ERP administration has been set up, the main decisions should be deferred till the next Congress. This is perhaps the most disheartening aspect of the current news and probably has something to do with the break in the stock market.

It was bad enough that the State Department, without regard to the planning that had been done on ERP, should have suggested what may amount to a dilution of that program by the admittance of China as a beneficiary, and the assumption of Far Eastern responsibilities in a world where we are already overextended. But any postponement of a substantive ERP, coming on top of our tepidity in encouraging western union, would be chilling. It would leave the world in a condition of drift which could mean only a loss of time in the giant enterprise of getting that accommodation with Russia which, in our view, awaits the restoration of order and strength in western Europe. If events are allowed to be the governor instead of the governed, statesmanship will have taken a holiday.

Falling Livestock

The drop in wholesale livestock prices is the natural corollary of what has happened on the grain exchanges. Meat producers, seeing the writing on the wall, have rushed cattle and hogs to market, with the result that a temporary jam has occurred. Undoubtedly there has been some disgorging of cattle that had been hoarded for higher prices. While there has not been time for the full impact of the fall to be felt at retail levels, there have been minor cuts on a few items. Certainly housewives will welcome the prospect of an occasional steak or pound of bacon without yielding their gold fillings in the purchase. And, to the extent that psychological factors bear on the price of meat, the consumer may experience some positive gains along this line.

There are, however, several inexorables which make any substantial permanent reduction in the price of meat unlikely now. The market drop cannot produce any more meat in the near future. Meanwhile the latest Department of Agriculture survey estimates that the total 1948 meat supply will be two billion pounds, or nearly 10 per cent, less than in 1947. In other words, a meat shortage is still ahead, and the present break may actually have a detrimental effect on supplies later in the year. This condition of relative shortage makes the chance that meat prices will follow the grain market remote as long as demand continues at its present intensity.

To be sure, grain prices have an important bearing on meat-production costs. Lower feed prices, plus improved crop conditions, bode well for a better and more reasonably priced meat supply next season. It would be wise, however, not to expect too much from the present flurry, encouraging as it is. Actually, any real adjustment in meat prices now may well depend on whether housewives counteract the stockpiling impulse and continue to buy selectively.

OAK RIDGE

Make not the sun too metropolitan,
Nor urbanize its fierce, dynamic flow;
Where the long journey of our light began
Peer not, nor trifle. Be content to know
The synchrony of seasons, cold and warm,
Feeling time's gears mesh deep within our hearts;
Let the wide universe with puzzles swarm,
And track no murky atoms with bright darts;

For empty miracles of cyclotrons
And sudden fissures to eternity
Will not reflesh the dead at Marathons,
Nor find the seeds of lost maternity,
Nor show the eager lovers in the shade

"Probing The AEC"

In an editorial in The Washington Post of February 5, "Probing the AEC," a reference is made to pending legislation which, if enacted, would elevate ". . . the FBI to an authority which no police agency should enjoy in a society supposed to be free." The editorial then refers to the FBI's investigation of applicants for Federal positions as having the effect of "approval of persons" chosen for appointment.

You, of course, are aware that the responsibility of the FBI is clearly defined by legislative enactments and directives of the President and the Attorney General. It is our duty to carry out the responsibilities imposed upon us by Congress. Neither in this instance nor in any other instance has the FBI injected itself into the legislative function of Congress except that we have, when proposed legislation has been called to our attention through official channels, uniformly taken a position against the inclusion of phrases in legislation which would place upon the FBI the responsibility of approving persons for appointment or special assignments.

The FBI is not a policy-making organization. It is strictly a fact-securing organization and does not make decisions with respect to action to be taken as a result of its investigations. I do think that in all fairness this fact should be made clear, for certainly without taking this into consideration it would appear that your editorial writer was lacking in objectivity.

JOHN EDGAR HOOVER.
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation.
Washington.

Editor's Note: We are glad to publish Mr. Hoover's reaffirmation that the FBI is "strictly a fact-securing organization and does not make decisions with respect to action to be taken as a result of its investigations." The editorial referred to did not question this long-established policy of the bureau. It asserted merely that the policy would inevitably be subverted by enactment of the Knowland bill requiring FBI investigation—and a report of such investigation to the Senate members of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy—in respect of presidential nominations to the Atomic Energy Commission.

Log Water Pipes

The undersigned was interested and amused to read, in your February 5 issue, under the heading "Diggers Uncover Conduit of Logs," the comment of Mr. Holmes that there is a hole 4 or 5 inches in diameter through the center of the logs, placed in the ground "before 1820, but I can't figure out how it got there."

That hole is no mystery; it was bored by hand with an auger. When I was a boy in northern Vermont 65 years or so ago, before either lead or iron pipe was plentiful, it was a very common practice in the rural communities to conduct water from a spring to a house or barn through what were called "water-logs" or "pump-logs." Fir logs were chosen because of their softness yet resistance to decay.

Two men, skilled in the work, would take a straight fir log 6 to 8 inches in diameter and 10 or 12 feet long, fasten it upon two wooden "horses" about level with a man's chest, place a 10 or 12-foot auger against one sawed-off end and bore a 2-inch hole straight through the heart of the log from end to end. If they were not skillful enough to bore all the way through without getting off dead center, they would bore half way through from each end.

Then they would ream out the butt end of one log, bevel and taper off the top of another, and drive the two together, water-tight, with a huge wooden mallet. They would continue this rotation of logs, buried 3 or 4 feet in a ditch, away from frost, until they had covered the distance, perhaps a half mile or so, from spring to house or barn. Of course, the prepared logs were placed in the ditch before being driven together.

It used to amuse me as a boy to watch the process; and I thought that a description of the modus operandi by an eyewitness would interest Mr. Holmes and his co-workers.

Costly Contests

Every time I read a newspaper or listen to the radio, I learn of manufacturers, producers and distributors giving away not thousands of dollars, but hundreds of thousands of dollars. To qualify all one has to do is to send in a boxtop and tell in 25 words or less "Why you like their product."

This form of sales promotion increases the cost of living during a crucial period like the present. I know one woman who is always entering contests and she must have a five-year supply of such products stored in her closet. She is always complaining about high prices. She is herself partly to blame. I know producers claim that the more they sell, the cheaper they can sell. That statement is rather weak at a time they can sell everything they produce.

The cost of sales promotion through advertising should be decreased and the savings applied toward lowering the selling price of commodities. When I say that I can do without those soap operas and sickening superiority claims on the radio I really mean it.

"The Reticent Foe"

I want to congratulate The Washington Post for its January 18 editorial discussing the subject of rats. I run a farm in Clarke County, Va., and have taken an interest in this subject because the time came when I concluded I would either have to run out of rats or they would take over and run the farm.

One of the Government rat experts told the writer that rat damage in the City of Washington alone amounts to 15 million dollars a year. Estimates of yearly rat damage on the farms in Virginia run to seven million dollars a year, and there are no estimates for the cities and town.

I quote in round figures from Government reports which I have studied on this subject: first, grain damage from rats and mice in America is estimated at 4 per cent. On the six billion bushels of grain raised in the United States last year this 4 per cent amounts to between 240 and 250 million bushels. What saves any grain saves wheat and if we could have rid the country of rats and mice the 100 million extra bushels which the President estimated we needed to save would have been saved, leaving 150 million bushels for chickens, hogs and cattle, thereby helping to keep prices down.

A matter of additional interest is the Government estimate of the damage done by various insects, such as, for example, Japanese beetle, corn borers, weevils in grain and other insect damage, much of which is avoidable. The amount of grain in America destroyed by rats and by these other pests amounts to 10%.

Every rat eats about a bushel of grain a year. I can think of nothing quite as practical for helping the world avoid starvation as an intelligent and sustaining drive against rats and grain-destroying insect pests. JAMES M. THOMPSON.
Gaylord, Va.

Latin America And ERP

Mr. Walter Lippmann's word in his column of February 5 could be the last if he did not omit essential facts. Latin Americans are not so concerned about getting dollars as much as about getting the things that dollars are supposed to buy. But since the removal of the OPA, the dollar buys much less. This is rendered worse by the rationing of export licenses to canalize scarce goods to Europe and China. Latin Americans have to go without or waste their scarce dollars on black market American goods.

This is no theory, but tragic fact and experience. Now they are promised another dose. Latin America is not planning to sell its economic independence, but to increase it by being more nearly self-supporting industrially. It wants to follow in the footsteps of the United States and cease being an economic colony of Europe.

The cause of communism is declared to be human distress resulting from economic breakdown, such as uncontrolled inflation, which sends up the cost of living and destroys the savings of the middle class. These inflationary tendencies are today present throughout the world due to various causes directly or indirectly connected with the war. They act spontaneously and do not need any priming or prompting from Moscow or the Cominform.

In order to fight communism the State Department has devised three different policies: in Europe, feed them out of it; in China, shoot them out of it, and in Latin America, talk them out of it. So we get a lot of conferences, councils and committees.

It is a growing belief of many people in Latin America that the methods tried in Europe should be extended in coordination with Latin America. It is believed that the chief source of European distress is overpopulation and that any assistance which does not take this paramount fact into consideration can only be termed temporary relief and hardly a radical cure.

While reconstructing the destroyed capital assets of Europe is, of course, of paramount importance, the very fact of dedicating men to reconstruction rather than to the production of consumable goods increases the inflationary pressure and the existing distress. Yet according to all reports Europe can take care of that herself in her own good time, if only she is helped with food and fuel; i. e. human and machine energy.

When we look at Latin America we see lands without men, hydro-electric power running to waste, coal and oil undeveloped. What can be more obvious than that European men must be brought to the resources they need?

The Peruvian Foreign Minister's friendly and constructive proposal to compound the Marshall Plan with a well prepared scheme of emigration to Latin America is an attempt to focus attention on this vital point. "Let us get together," he says, "let us make the major permanent plan, not the unconnected contradictory patchwork."

For we must bear in mind that Latin America also has a position to defend; she must also have an anti-Communist policy in line with President Truman's. Some countries have problems of internal distress pulling in the direction of radical leftist revolutionary movements, disguised under various names, but all adding up to a totalitarian upsetting of the established order. And it so happens that a plan to aid Europe that does not take into consideration its reactions upon Latin America would greatly increase her problems.

'Buying' Good Bureaucrats

By Malvina Lindsay

Heckled Leaders

"NO OUTSTANDING men or women will come to work for me," laments Uncle Sam.

"What is the country coming to!" cry the viewers with alarm. We'll soon be completely governed by rabbity bureaucrats."

"Somebody do something quick!" shouts the public.

"I have it!" exclaims the man of the hour. "We'll pass a law—give 'em a raise of a thousand or two. No sound, high-caliber millionaire is willing to starve on $10,000 a year."

Thus it is all neatly settled, this crisis in Government executive service. For many of us would solve this problem the same way we would like to write Europe and China off our conscience—with a handout.

However, other reasons than money are causing able Americans to refuse executive posts, and causing many of those in such posts to leave them. Men and women highly paid by private business do not, as a rule, take governmental jobs for the salaries. Usually they are responding to calls to patriotism.

Badgering by Congress and ingratitude from the public cause many outstanding citizens to shy away from big Government jobs. Also they cannot be sure of being backed loyally and aggressively by their superiors, or have security and stability in their work. They are in imminent danger of being made pawns of political conflict, of being thrown to the wolves personally by those who are fighting their programs. Sometimes the value of what they have done is recognized only after it has been torn down.

A CASE in point is that of William Benton, former Assistant Secretary of State in Charge of Cultural Affairs, who is now receiving wide tribute for what he did in setting up an overseas information program, including the "Voice of America." At the time of Mr. Benton's resignation the report was bandied about that he and Congress could not get on together, hence the paring down of his information program. But now members of Congress, including those who were represented as clashing with him, have been praising him highly.

Members of Congress who went to Europe last summer came home enthusiastic about the foundation laid there for an information program. It is now generally recognized that Mr. Benton was responsible for getting from Congress the backing that enabled him to organize this program. The Government has continued calling on his services. He recently headed the United States delegation to the Mexico City Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. It is reported he will soon be asked by the Secretary of State to represent this country at another important world conference.

IF THE COUNTRY is not to be run by the mercenary and the mediocre, some way must be found to create an atmosphere in Government that will attract the most capable men and women. No one can imagine a rush of volunteers to be heckled at congressional inquisitions, to be derided by an unthinking public baying "bureaucrat."

Women, of whom there should be more in policy-making governmental posts, often seem to be special game for this sort of thing. Who does not remember the punishment the first woman member of the Cabinet took? Lesser women officials frequently have to "ride the goat," suffering discourtesy and sarcasm, when presenting to congressional committees the needs of their departments.

Authorities on Government are deeply concerned about this, especially since the University of Chicago recently announced that it would no longer advise its faculty members, or graduates, to take governmental posts. A widespread education of the public is needed to awaken it and its representatives to the consequences of tearing down by misunderstanding and misstatement those it pays taxes to employ.

Relief Ambiguity

To illustrate the ambiguities of the relief setup currently operating, may I cite the following case: Mrs. C. was deserted by her husband five years ago, leaving her with five children from 5 to 10 years of age. During the war years she held a steady job earning $45 weekly, supporting her little family decently.

With the return of servicemen she was displaced; she has not since been able to get a full-time position although she is intelligent and reliable. She secured a part-time position where she earns $15 weekly, which is not enough to pay rent, buy food and the clothes that the children require to attend school. Her rent is $50 monthly for two rooms.

She was referred to several welfare agencies for supplementary assistance, but has been told that she can only get aid if she gives up her part-time work and depends solely upon the agencies for relief. One agency advised her to give up her work and apply for mothers' assistance. She is young, courageous, willing, anxious to be as independent as possible. It seems unreasonable to penalize a woman for wanting to work instead of shirk.

Architectural Lapses

Three cheers for Mr. Ickes.

I heartily concur with his criticisms (in his letter of February 7) of the construction of the "bubble-gum" balcony at the White House and the "glorified outhouse" before the Interior Department, as well as the public's apparent disinterest in the perpetration of these atrocities. FRITZ R. KAHN.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Some White House Visitors

TOWARD THE close of last week, the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Senator J. Howard McGrath, and the committee's executive director, Gael Sullivan, called at the White House to receive a significant warning.

President Truman told his visitors the Palestine problem was now so grave that it could only be handled on the highest level of American policy-making. And he strictly enjoined both McGrath and Sullivan not to interfere in any way, either by bringing pressure on the White House about Palestine, or by offering unauthorized encouragement to the Zionist leaders who are pouring into Washington to ask for aid.

The incident primarily discloses the change that has been wrought in the Administration by belated realization of the danger of a Palestine catastrophe. The full measure of this change can only be taken by contrasting last week's episode at the White House with one which occurred shortly before the 1946 elections.

At that time, in London, the British were seeking Arab and Jewish agreement to a Palestine compromise, on the basis of the findings of the first Anglo-American Investigating Committee. While these negotiations were going on, the President's adviser, David Niles, brought word to Truman that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York would shortly advocate immediate opening of Palestine to large-scale Jewish immigration. Truman's political managers led by Robert Hannegan, McGrath's predecessor as Democratic Committee chairman, urged that the President forestall Dewey with a statement of his own.

A DRAFT was prepared. Issuance of the statement was opposed by the State Department, but the department could only secure permission to notify the British of what was afoot. Prime Minister Attlee instantly replied to the President, promising that a settlement was in sight in London, but warning that White House intervention would render agreement impossible.

Nonetheless, on Hannegan's insistence, Truman issued his statement asking that Palestine be opened to 100,000 Jewish immigrants. Dewey, not to be outdone, followed with another statement asking for even larger immigration. The London negotiations collapsed. And the British mood of hysteria and neurosis about Palestine, which has led to so much subsequent folly, thereupon set in.

In the earlier case, in short, the President permitted American policy to be made by his political managers. Now, on the contrary, he has confided the whole task of policy-making to the representatives of the State and armed service departments, who compose the newly formed National Security Council.

Nor is this the only evidence of change in the President. There have been others—some of them, if one must speak honestly, of a far from admirable character.

ONE SUCH is the entirely authentic report of the White House visit of a leading American Zionist, who asked for the lifting of the embargo on arms shipments to Palestine. The President told his visitor, with great bitterness, that he would not be party to any steps likely to lead to eventual direct American intervention. Thus far, whether he was right or wrong, the President was at least within his prerogative. But he then went on to blame the American Zionists, again with great bitterness, for preventing a settlement a year ago. The charge, if true, could only be true in the sense that the President himself yielded too far to the American Zionists pressure. It is difficult to imagine a more remarkable abnegation of the final responsibility that is inherent in the Presidency.

But the reflections of these incidents on the President's stature as a leader are far less important than the reflection they cast upon the status of the Palestine problem. Where human lives and human suffering and human hopes are among the stakes in the game, the fact is difficult to state without seeming crude. But the crude fact is that Palestine has always been deeply involved in domestic politics.

A bipartisan effort is now quietly going on to get Palestine out of politics. The President's political managers, McGrath and Sullivan, frankly fear that Palestine will hurt him more in the coming election than the phony candidacy of Henry A. Wallace. Every leader of every Northern Democratic organization, from David Lawrence in Pennsylvania to Mayor D'Dwyer in New York, has addressed frantic appeals to Washington for the lifting of the arms embargo and other steps, on grounds of pure political expediency. Nonetheless, McGrath and Sullivan assented to the President's injunction against any further interference because of their sense of the terrible dangers inherent in this problem.

For this very reason, it is to be hoped that the effort to keep Palestine out of politics will be at least partly successful. As to what American Palestine policy ought to be, it is possible to argue for weeks and months. But on one point, there can be no argument. It is impossible to condone the practice of giving weight to such factors as the desirability of forestalling Governor Dewey, when great complex and tragic world problems are demanding settlement.

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 10.—Russian accusations of "imperialistic warmongering" against the United States do not seem to be making much impression on the minds of other countries.

In fact, a survey of public opinion in seven foreign nations, five of them in Europe, shows that the majority of the people think that it is Russia, not the United States, which would likely start a war of aggression.

We are associated in the minds of the majority with the symbols of peace and goodwill, rather than self-aggrandizement.

In January, France, Holland, Italy, Sweden, Norway, Canada and Brazil voters were asked two questions.

The first question was:

"Do you think Russia would start a war to get something she wanted (such as more territory or more resources)—or would she fight only if attacked?"

Here is the vote in the seven foreign nations, and also in the United States, where the same poll was conducted.

	Would Start War	Defense Only	No Opin.
U. S. A.	73%	19%	8%
Canada	60	26	14
Holland	57	27	16
France	51	22	27
Italy	50	17	33
Brazil	43	16	41
Sweden	42	21	37
Norway	37	37	26

* * * *

The second question:

"Do you think the United States would start a war to get something she wanted (such as more territory or more resources)—or would she fight only if attacked?"

The vote:

	Would Start War	Defense Only	No opin.
Norway	23%	55%	22%
France	20	56	24
Holland	16	60	24
Italy	16	48	36
Canada	13	77	10
Sweden	13	54	33
Brazil	9	53	38
U.S.A.	5	92	3

The surveys brought out the fact that in countries where the Communist Party is of importance numerically the vote of the Communists is overwhelmingly favorable to Russia and unfavorable to the United States.

In France, for example, 83 per cent of Communists said that Russia would never go to war except in self defense, whiel 69 per cent said that the United States would go to war to get something she wanted. The Communists were the only party in France to express this view.

In Holland, too, the Communists polled said that Russia would only fight in self defense whereas the United States would fight for self-aggrandizement. In Italy the same pattern of thinking was also found.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

ERP: Details Vs. Goal

A SINGLE word sums up the doubts and uncertainties that today plague the European Recovery Program. That word is fear.

Childs

Policy-makers in the State Department are afraid of Congress. Republicans in Congress who have carried the burden of leadership of the recovery program are fearful that a little band of Republican Senators mean to pare the program down to mere breadline dimensions. Back of this is the fear of an irreparable split in the party in a year when victory seems so close.

Nothing illustrates these fears so well as the recent off-again-on-again business over a proposed new meeting of the 16 Marshall Plan nations in Europe. It shows a pathetic lack of the kind of boldness that is called for if the Western world is to triumph over the forces of deterioration and decay.

Over and over again in this country the Europeans are criticized for their failure to get together on practical measures of cooperation. Thoroughly aware of this criticism and its bearing on the national attitude toward aid to Europe, certain leaders in France pressed for a new meeting of representatives of the Marshall Plan countries.

With the help of allies in this country, pressure was put on London, where there was reluctance. If Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's fine words about a western European union were to mean anything, it was argued, then a healthy demonstration of practical cooperation right away would be in order.

FINALLY, a meeting was agreed to. A tentative date was set and a planning committee began to work out an agenda. High up on that agenda was a proposal to discuss the kind of political conditions which, if specified in an aid program, would make it unworkable.

When this was cabled back to the State Department, it gave policy-makers the nervous tremors. They began to imagine immediately how Congress would react to such a discussion at the very moment when the fate of the recovery bill would be in the balance.

So strong were these fears that a wire went from Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett urging that the meeting either be called off or postponed. This was enough of a hint for those who had been preparing for the session and so, as of this date, the 16 nations will not get together again.

A far simpler solution would have been to suggest that the discussion of political conditions be taken off the schedule. Then a meeting might have been held which would have helped to silence criticism here. As it is, that criticism goes on.

THE TALK of compromise on the recovery program in Congress is another example of the dictate of fear. The realists argue, of course, that in an election year, with authority divided between a Republican Congress and a Democratic President, this is the only way to insure passage of a bill within the ever-pressing time schedule. And the realists have a lot on their side. The alternative would seem to be a slam-bang battle prolonged into June or July.

That is why the compromisers are working so earnestly to find a quick and painless way out. A half dozen proposals are under study. One is to ask Congress merely for an authorization by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to cover the first 12 months of Marshall Plan operation. This would be a sum of 5 to 5½ billions.

That would prevent a showdown over the $6,800,000,000—the sum requested by the Administration for the first 15 months. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, foreign policy leader in the Senate, has let it be known that such a showdown might wreck the plan itself.

On the other hand, a compromise might divert public attention from the real issues involved. The strategy of the bitter-end opposition has been to avoid any frontal attack on the plan while constantaly sniping at details of administration, size of appropriations, and so on. Behind the facade of a compromise the bitter-enders could work to undermine the purpose of the plan.

This last is just now giving Secretary of State George C. Marshall deep concern. In the important speech he will deliver before the National Farm Institute in Des Moines, Iowa, at the end of the week, he is expected to warn that the primary goal of European reconstruction is being lost sight of in a quibble over details. That is a timely warning which should be heeded here in Washington.

Thomas Will Be Flown Here for Hospital Care

Balboa Heights, Canal Zone, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Navy said Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) will be flown Saturday to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington.

Thomas was stricken with a stomach ailment when en route by ship to investigate subversive influences in the Canal Zone. He is a patient at Margarita Hospital, which he entered January 26.

Thomas' condition was considered extremely critical upon arrival on the S. S. Anchon. He has been improving slowly.

Reds Plan New Attack on U. S. Over Secret War Documents

Moscow, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Russia prepared a new blast tonight in a "war of documents" with the American State Department, promising to reveal secret diplomatic documents calculated to pin responsibility for World War II on the Western Allies.

The documents still to come, the Soviet information bureau promised, will include many which are in possession of the United States and Britain—and possibly France—which they are concealing from the world.

There was no indication when the second part of the Russian retort to the State Department's publication of secret documents on Russo-German relations would be published.

There was no suspense—or embarrassment—apparent at the United States, British and French Embassies today.

It was indicated that the embassies had sent only routine reports to their home governments on the Soviet information bureau statement published last night.

The feeling here was that the real documentary bombardment would come in the second part of the statement.

The Soviet information bureau said that as far back as 1945 Britain turned down a proposal to check all documents before publication, and that in the same year the United States presented a proposal to the Allied Control Council for Germany for uniform handling of documents. But it was claimed the Americans and Britons suddenly stopped the discussion.

Publishing of Secret Text Debated by U. S.

By the United Press

The State Department was debating yesterday whether to publish the still secret text of an agreement with Britain and France under which joint publication of Nazi foreign office documents was planned.

American officials admit privately that publication of all Nazi documents would include some embarrassing to the West as well as to the Soviets. They also admit, likewise privately, that the documents on Soviet-Nazi relations were selected for publication from the tons of papers as part of the "cold war" with the Soviet Union and as an answer to Russia's persistent charges that the United States has embarked on a policy of imperialism.

State Department spokesman Michael J. McDermott told his news conference yesterday that the Russians had neither asked the United States nor been asked by the United States to join the project now sponsored by the United States, Britain and France.

(A Foreign Office spokesman in London, however, held out an open invitation to Russia to join the West in the project for publishing the documents as a historical—not a political—record.)

Too Much Shaw Here, He Fears

By Richard L. Coe

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW has let it be known that he's against too many productions of his plays in this country at the same time . . . The wise old Irishman feels it's bad business to give people too much of a good thing . . . At the moment Maurice Evans is doing his "Man and Superman" in New York, the Gate Players of Dublin have opened their American season in "John Bull's Other Island" and the Theater Guild is opening a pre-Gotham tour of "You Never Can Tell" in Wilmington tomorrow night . . . Whether Shaw gets any revenue from "The Chocolate Soldier," which will be along for two weeks at the National beginning March 1, we don't know . . . But it would be most unlike him to have permitted "Arms and the Man" to become an operetta without writing in one of his famed protective clauses . . . Considering that Shaw bases his take on 15 per cent, which is more than any other author manages to insist on, you can see that for a penniless young Londoner from such an outpost of empire as Ireland, Shaw has assumed practically the status of an international banker.

AS FOR THE NATIONAL offering another operetta this season, it's perhaps startling, but not surprising . . . So far we've had "Oklahoma!," "The Red Mill," "Rose Marie," "The Merry Widow," "The Firefly," "Sweethearts," "Carousel," "The Student Prince," "Song of Norway" and the current "Blossom Time." . . . Their playing time totals 19 weeks . . . Add to this two for Billy Gilbert's production of "The Chocolate Soldier" and two for Spike Jones right after that, and you get 23 weeks of musicals at the Capital's lone playhouse . . . Shocking as this total must be to playgoers who prefer drama, it's more shocking when you discover that there's very little else on the road which E st. hasn't already had . . . This week for the first time in living man's memory there's not one legitimate attraction in Boston, always a strong citadel . . . It's all part of the depressing picture we've outlined for you from time to time in our Sunday sermons . . . It is a pity that some plays which have had out of town tours haven't hit the Nation's Capital, which an erudite gentleman described to us the other day as a city which has all the chivalry of the North and all the efficiency of the South . . . Still, you can't blame it on the National particularly . . . It's what the poets call "Life."

THE WASHINGTON Film Council today changes its place of meeting, moving to a private upstairs dining room at Olmsted's Restaurant, 1336 G st. . . . The council now is preparing for its election of officers the first week in March . . . Today's topic, at 12:30, will be "Script Development and Function in the Production of Educational Films," by Dr. Samuel F. Harby, medical film consultant of the Veterans Administration.

TOMORROW NIGHT sees the opening of the Mount Vernon Players' production of "Deirdre of the Sorrows" . . . John Millington Synge's version of the Irish legend will be presented with projected settings designed by Huldah McNinch . . . Jeanette Marr, who played in the group's "The Taming of the Shrew," has the title role opposite Bob Pomeroy . . . Orville French will be the King of Ulster . . . There is no charge for tickets which may be had by calling District 1484 between 7 and 9:30 nightly.

"SHOE SHINE" today begins its third week at the Little, after a beginning which suggests those two lads of the Roman streets will be on the Ninth st. cinema's screen for weeks . . . It couldn't happen to a better picture.

THIS AFTERNOON, by the way, there will NOT be a mid-week matinee at the National . . . "Blossom Time," instead, will be staying through Sunday, when it will give both matinee and evening performances.

Tomorrow Official Holiday, But County Has Own Ideas

As far as the State of Maryland is concerned, Lincoln's birthday tomorrow is a legal holiday.

But in Prince Georges County it is, and it isn't.

The county commissioners decided yesterday that county offices will remain open.

Brice Bowie, clerk of the circuit court, announced his office will close. James Bland, county treasurer, said the collection section of his office will be closed, although the bookkeeping section (which is under control of the commissioners) will be open.

School Offices Open

County School Supt. G. Gardner Shugart said the board of education offices in the courthouse will remain open.

Chief of Police Ralph Brown said: "You can bet on one thing—the police department will be on the job." He said: "But you'd better do your betting outside Prince Georges County!"

Lincoln's Birthday was made a legal holiday in Maryland as the closing act of the last session of tthe General Assembly. All State offices and banks will be closed.

The County Commissioners at thteir meeting yesterday, also took the following other actions:

1. Approved setting up garbage and trash collection for Bradbury Heights, Special Improvement District No. 29.

2. Ordered closing of the abandoned stretch of the old Marlboro-Largo road through the property of Samuel A. Wyvill, north of Marlboro.

3. Approved appointment as a forest warden of Daniel Rauch, jr., 6915 Shepherd st., Landover Hills, Md.

Terrier Helps Master Rout Holdup Men

Charles A. Michie's fox terrier has earned its board and keep.

Michie, 40, of 1424 Rhode Island ave. nw., was set upon by footpads at 7 p. m. Monday in the rear of the 1300 block of 14th st. nw. Between Michie's resistance and the 13-year-old dog's yaps and nips, the two assailants were put to flight.

Not so fortunate was Mrs. Margaret D. Templeton, 48, of 3514 Park pl. nw. She lost her purse and $23 to someone who struck her on the head and fled with her purse as she walked along the 500 block of Park rd. nw. early Monday.

Police yesterday searched hospitals in search of three men who might have been wounded when a watchman fired four shots at them as they fled with $100 from a restaurant cash register. The place looted was the Harris restaurant, 1401 11th st. nw., shortly after midnight.

Pearson Tells Of Wealth at FCC Hearing

By The Associated Press

The Public Service Radio Corp. offered evidence yesterday intended to show that Drew Pearson, Robert S. Allen and its other backers are financially qualified to operate a station in Baltimore.

The corporation is applying for the wave length assigned to WBAL, owned by Hearst Radio Inc. The latter is seeking a renewal of its license, and contends Public Service lacks adequate finances.

The Federal Communications Commission consolidated both applications for comparative purposes.

Pearson, vice president and treasurer of the corporation, newspaper columnist and radio commentator, testified yesterday he had a net financial worth of $246,292.

Previously Allen, corporation president, testified he had a net financial worth of $235,000.

Public Service filed its application after issuance of a commission blue book condemning WBAL, on the basis it failed to allot adequate time for Public Service programs.

The hearing will be resumed Monday, February 16 in Baltimore at a time and place to be announced Friday.

Va. Delegates Vote Richmond Charter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 10 (Spl.).—The Richmond Charter Bill, with of city council intact, today was provision for nonpartisan election passed by the House of Delegates without a dissenting vote.

Advocates of similar bills for nonpartisan election of governing bodies found cheer in the lack of opposition. From Arlington County, proponents of such elections had journeyed here Monday to aid sponsors of the charter bill.

In the Senate, Senator Andrew Clarke of Fairfax introduced his amended bill to offer daylight-saving to those counties wanting it. As drafted originally the bill applied only to Fairfax County.

Senator Clarke said yesterday he had the bill withdrawn and personally rephrased it to make it applicable to all counties. The bill, he said, will permit a county board of supervisors, or other governing body, to adopt daylight saving by submission of formal resolution to the Governor.

Unanimous passage of the Richmond Charter Bill, which gives the capital city a manager form of government, came only after 58 delegates voted precedent-setting action. They voted inclusion in the House Journal of a statement that their votes for the bill "not be construed" as their opinion that the measure was entirely constitutional.

The move, they said, was propted by tht bill's Primary prohibition clause which permits nonpartisan elections through selection of councilmen at large.

Delegate Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria, subcommittee member of the House committee on counties, cities and towns, told the delegates there was still some question of constitutionality on the matter. He conceded, however, that decisions of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, argue for its apparent validity.

During a day of major actions the Assembly also:

Received in the House, the education bill recommended by the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council to put the board of education under a full-time, paid chairman of business experience.

Received by the Senate, a bill to create a unified State-wide juvenile and domestic relations court system, in 17 designated State districts. The measure was sponsored by Senator Mosby G. Perrow of Lynchburg.

Received a bill from Delegate L. R. Wyatt of Danville to make certain cooperatives liable to the same taxes as private businesses. Those marketing farmers' crops, however, would pay a $10 license fee in lieu of other levies.

Killed, in the House general laws committee, the Moncure Bill providing jury service for women, and the Haynes Bill creating a State board of cosmetic art examiners.

Received in the Senate a bill to allow the State highway commission to increase maximum load limits for certain types of trucks on State roads.

Passed by the House, bills enabling State police to set up a finger-printing system covering persons charged with felonies, and forbidding the giving of false reports to police.

Referred to a six-man subcommittee, Senate bill 144, by Senators L. C. Bird of Chesterfield, Benjamin T. Pitts of Fredericksburg and Robert Y. Burton of Culpeper, which would require State reimbursement for care of insane, epileptic, feeble-minded persons or these addicted to drugs or alcohol.

The legislature convened a few minutes late today because of the lengthy Democratic caucus at which Congressman J. Lindsay Almond was nominated State's Attorney General, and Harold F. Snead of Henrico County was nominated judge of the Richmond-Henrico Circuit Court.

3 Firemen Hurt In $50,000 Blaze At D. C. Night Club

Three firemen were slightly injured in a stubborn fire yesterday which destroyed the Off Beat night club at 1849 7th st. nw., and caused damage estimated at $50,000.

Hurt in fighting the blaze, which took more than four hours to extinguish, were Pvt. Ralph Gordon, Engine Company No. 12; Pvt. J. Richard Hunt, Engine Company No. 9, and Pvt. Robert Lineburger, Engine Company No. 4.

The fire was discovered at about 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning by Mary Balford, who was cleaning the club, and Matthew Tassyn, the club manager.

New Health Center Asked In Rockville

A new building for the Montgomery County health department to relieve "critical overcrowding" is urgently needed, the Montgomery County commissioners were told yesterday by the Maryland State health department.

Describing the need as "acute," Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State department of health, urged the commissioners to "proceed immediately with plans for a new building."

He said the new offices should provide space to house all activities of the department as well as allow for expansion. The building should be located in or near Rockville where it would be close to other county agencies, he said.

In his letter asking the commissioners, Dr. Riley pointed out that passage of the Hill-Burton Act "has made Federal funds available for grants-in-aid to such projects."

The commissioners failed to discuss the proposal and took it under advisement.

A delegation of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau, headed by President James D. King, formally asked the commissioners to abolish the county's personal property tax on farm implements.

Reading a resolution adopted at the farm bureau's annual meeting, President King contended the tax had become "unfair" since repeal last year of the personal property tax on household goods.

By a 3-1 vote on February 3, the commissioners had rejected a similar plea by W. Lawson King, prominent county dairyman, and yesterday reiterated their firm opposition to the farmers' request.

Montgomery Group Favors Rent Control

Continuation of rent control was called for last night by the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Chairman Harold E. Wirth of the federation's special committee on housing, predicted large-scale rental increases and evictions if controls should be removed with expiration of the present rent-control act.

"Builders are able to set nearly any rent they wish on new or converted structures, therefore the continuance of rent control will not be a major factor in discouraging construction of rental units, he said.

In other resolutions, the federation, meeting in Bethesda Elementary Srhool, also:

1. Called on Maryland representatives in Congress to work for reinstatement of a $1,494,000 item in the Independent Offices appropriations bill, as requested by Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission for acquisition of park lands in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. The amount had been stricken out by the House Appropriations Committee.

2. Went on record as opposing a Federal tax on oleomargarine. County Agent O. W. Anderson told the delegates the action was "a slap in the face for the Montgomery County dairy industry."

3. Urged initiation of a comprehensive program to eliminate the Japanese bettle as "a major menace to plant life in the county."

4. Referred to a committee a proposal that public utilities commissions of Washington, Maryland and Virginia sit as a joint body for actions affecting the Greater Washington area.

Ministers' Role Stressed by La Roe

Grand Rapids, Mich, Feb. 10 (AP).—Ministers of the church were described by a Presbyterian layman today as "the most important people in the world—more important than generals."

The statement was made by Wilbur La Roe, Washington, D. C., attorney, before the International Council of Religious Education.

2nd National Gross at New 76-Year Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

From an operating income standpoint, Second National Bank experienced in 1947 the best 12 months in the institution's 76-year history.

Reilly

In his annual statement to stock holders, President John A. Reilly summarized the year as follows:

Gross earnings reached an all-time peak of $818,526, an increase of 17 per cent over 1946.

Gross expenses of $590,079 were $72,088 or 14 per cent heavier.

Net operating earnings totaled $228,447, or $47,000 improved.

Loans and discounts on December 31, 1947, aggregated $12,331,312, or 28 per cent greater on the same date of the previous year.

Reviewing the year's operations, Reilly said the bank paid $30,000 more in dividends than in 1946, liquidated all recapitalization expenses, set up ample reserves for Federal income taxes, and added nearly $40,000 to undivided profits.

A drop of $1,245,114 in deposits, he added, was due principally to withdrawals by the Treasury from the war loan deposit account.

Referring to the recapitalization program involving the sale of a million dollars worth of additional stock, Reilly stated that only 25 of the 10,000 new shares were left to be taken up by the underwriter.

RAIL EARNINGS: The Association of American Railroads reported that the 130 class 1 railroads had net income of 480 million dollars last year, compared with 293 million dollars in 1946, described by the association as an "abnormally low earning year." Total operating revenues for the class 1 lines in 1947 were reported at $8,684,694,310, compared with $7,628,401,894 in 1946—or an increase of 13.8 per cent. Operating expenses last year totaled $6,797,062,484 against $6,358,191,106 the year before—an increase of 6.9 per cent.

SIZABLE BLOCK: Holdings of common stock of U. S. Steel Corp. in the District of Columbia on December 31, 1947, totaled 69,354 shares, exclusive of shares held in brokers' names, an increase over the 68,755 held the year before, the corporation announced yesterday. Holdings of preferred stock by others than brokers amounted to 42,714 shares, compared with 43,406 held in 1946. Geographical ownership is based upon stockholders' addresses appearing on corporation records.

UP AGAIN: Women's calves may become the prey of icy breezes again. Even before the girls get through letting out their hems, they may have to take a tuck in them. The news comes from Paris, where a certain Christian Dior has shortened skirts to 14 or 15 inches from the floor. He calls his newest skirts "Fly Away."

ODD LOTS: William A. Spaugh, instalment loan department manager of American Security & Trust Co., will address the Auditors Section of District Bankers Association tomorrow night in Burlington Hotel . . . Commerce Department reported 1947 sales of independent wholesalers set a new high of $63,360,000,000, or about 15 per cent higher than the previous record in 1946 . . . Recommended reading: "The American Battle for Abundance," written by Charles F. Kettering and Allen Orth of General Motors Corp. Free copies available at Washington office of General Motors Corp., 200 Hill Building . . . Warren S. Stone was the leading Washington agent of New York Life Insurance Co. in both sales volume and number of new applications during 1947 . . . George Estin, a director of Alleghany Corp., has called upon the corporation to eliminate bank loans and prior preferred stock, asserting "we should not gamble with borrowed money."

EARNINGS: Atlas Plywood Corp. reported record net income of $1,698,940 for first six months of fiscal year, equal to $2.83 a common share, compared with $1,371,550 or $2.28 for same period of previous fiscal year. Other income reports included:

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 10 (AP)—Cotton futures broke the daily trading limit of $10 a bale today on a heavy wave of liquidation. Final prices were $7.10 to $10 a bale lower.

It was the first limit decline in prices on the New York Exchange since late October, 1946, when quotations crashed $10 a bale for three successive days in a major price correction.

General selling was stimulated by the limit declines in grains and weakness in the securities market. In addition, there was some overflow selling from the grain market and Southern traders pressed offerings on the New York market which could not be executed on the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. The New Orleans market was closed for the Mardi Gras holiday.

Ringside Table

By Mary Harris

SYLVIA FROOS, bubbling with gayety, made her initial bow at Club Cairo last night. She hasn't been in town since she starred at the Capitol Theater . . . Tato and Julia evoke the Caribbean spirit in rumbas and a fire-worshipping dance, than turn toward Harlem in a burlesque jitterbugging. Held over—and again, is Jay Jason, funnier than a gross of crutches. If you catch the Cairo dinner show you'd better hang around for the late show, too. That's when Jay does his "Baseball Game" special, a roaring bit that has lured many customers back for repeat visits.

Thelma King, dancing star of many a Broadway musical, will head the new Lotus revue opening tomorrow night. Other acts, too, and Buddy Shaner, Lotus ever-pop emcee, has a bunch of fresh songs.

JULIAN'S LINCOLN. Julian Altman, orchestra leader at the Pall Mall Room (he plays Statler luncheon music also), has acquired the huge Lincoln automobile recently owned by Senator Kenneth Wherry.

"Now I can ride along and make believe to myself that I'm a Latin-American diplomat or something," says Julian. "But then, darn it! I've gotta climb out carrying my fiddle."

Now, incidentally, Julian's band is one of the best. Credit not only to Julian's violin, but Roger Ellick's French horn, Eddy Whitesell's piano, Chauncie Cooper's saxx and Leon Farber's drums. Julian should add two more men, change his name to Julian Alvarez. Then he'd be all set for booking into an uptown hotel at a fancy price as "the sensation of Havana."

A shepherd to his clientele is "Mayor" Ciro Gallotti, owner of Ciro's. From his bandstand he shouts kindly, "Eat all you can, sing all you can. But, please—don't try to drink all you can." Amen, Mayor.

LOVELY LISTENING. Darkly alluring Rita Dimitriou of the Old New Orleans gives a delicately romantic accent to "Symphony," is brightly playful in "Greek Peasant Song." They're both definitely caviar items . . . "If you have tears, prepare to shed them now," says the King Cole Room's Dona Mason in the manner of the Bard. Then she launches into an almost sobbing version of "Now Is the Hour" . . . The Casino Royal's new singing emcee, Patricia Lane, gives a husky thrill to Cole Porter's initable "You Go to My Head" . . .

Deke Moffitt, head man of the Rainbow Room's Little Red Caboosers, has written a sentimental one, titled wistfully, "Are You All of My Future or Part of My Past?" It's smoothly tuneful . . . For razzle-dazzle South American rhythm, Freddy Castro's band in the Mayflower Lounge can take it away every time . . . It's black magic—"Paganini's Witches' dance," as violined by Michel at Michel's.

Nora Gilbert, chic public relations director of the Mayflower Lounge, is retiring temporarily from the publicity field. She's busy inspecting bassinettes.

UNSPEAKABLE WEATHER has no terrors for Bill Thompson and his Neptune Room Trio. He says, "Last year when we were at Grand Forks, S. Dak., they had weather that was weather. When it wasn't snowing, which was most of the time, they had dust storms."

INDOOR SCENERY. Did you know that the Anchor Room's interior is an exact duplicate of below decks in an American cruiser? . . . And that a stream of real water runs through the first floor of O'Donnell's? You cross it over a little bridge . . . Home decorators may gleam a bright idea from the Brown Derby. The striped wall paper is applied horizontally. Makes the room look bigger . . .

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

—HARRY HARPER, the old left-hander who used to pitch for the Nats, Red Sox and Yankees, nigh onto 30 years ago, is in there pitching now for the Republican nomination as United States Senator from New Jersey. If elected, New Jersey could boast the only Senator ever to lose a 1-0 pitching duel to the late Walter Johnson.

POVICH

Harper is the State Labor Commissioner of New Jersey and thus a ringing exhibit in refutation of the theory that the old-time ball players retired to their front stoops or became public charges when the years caught up with them. Now he's taking dead aim on the Senate seat of Senator Albert W. Hawkes.

When he was with the Nats back around 1915, Harper was something less than senatorial timber in the view of the anguished fans who grouped him with Jim Shaw and Harry Courtney as a partial answer to what was wrong with the Washington ball team. None of them could get the ball over the plate with any consistency, although all of 'em could throw hard.

Harper improved, though. He won 14 games for the Nats in 1916, and after he was traded to the Red Sox he did well enough to be bought by the Yankees in time for the 1921 World Series.

ALL THIS WAS before my time, you understand, but I had occasion to read up on Harper one day in Boston back in the 30's. I was breakfasting with Walter Johnson, then manager of the Nats, when Johnson said casually, "Well, 10 years ago today, I had a nice day against the Red Sox—pitched my only no-hitter."

That would make it July 1, 1920, and across the street from the Copley Plaza Hotel, the old Boston newspaper files were easily available at the public library. There the story was, under the streamer headline: "Harry Harper loses 1-0 game to Washington," and as magnificent an example of home-town reporting as these eyes ever beheld.

The Boston Post story, as I remember it, was written by the late Paul Shannon, a real nice guy in our profession and capable, too, but in this instance he must have been suffused by the tough break of Harper in losing the game on a scratch hit, because that was the theme of his report. What he wrote was:

"HARRY HARPER made a gallant bid to pitch the Red Sox to victory over the Senators yesterday at Fenway Park, but was beaten on a scratch hit by Bucky Harris in the seventh inning that scored the only run of a 1-0 game . . . Harper was at his best from the start and the Senators were having a difficult time with his slants, but an infield hit by Harris that bounced off the glove of Shorstop Everett Scott brought the Senators their only run . . . Harper held the Senators to only seven hits."

For six inches of type, the Post's story bled for the left-handed Harper, who had been cheated of a shut-out, but finally Shannon got down to cases. ". . . Walter Johnson," he wrote, "pitched a no-hit game for the Senators."

It was, you know, the only no-hitter Johnson pitched in his 21 years on the mound for Washington and the paradox was that he was having the worst season of his career, otherwise. It would have been a no-reach-first game for Johnson had Bucky Harris not booted a grounder by Harry Hooper, the only Red Sox to get to first base.

With two out in the ninth, Hooper all but broke up the no-hit game. He lashed a fierce drive to First Baseman Joe Judge who made a fancy one-hand pickup. Walter Johnson raced over from first base to take bare-handed Judge's throw on a great play that sealed his no-hitter.

THE KIND OF baseball reporting that didn't give Johnson credit for a no-hitter until the fifth paragraph of the story has disappeared, we flatter ourselves, although baseball writers sometimes do succumb to home-town influence. Like in Cincinnati where the newspapers call the Reds "Our Boys" through thick and thin.

His typewriter is a pretty powerful weapon sometimes for the baseball writer, like the New York reporter who had a running feud with Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, for years. He hero-worshipped Manager Joe McCarthy, but lost no opportunity to criticize Ruppert's conduct of the team's affairs, and so it was that he wrote following an even break for the Yankees in a double header at Philadelphia one day:

"Joe McCarthy's Yankees won a thrilling 4-3 game from the Athletics in the opener today, and in the second game Colonel Ruppert's Yankees took a fearful 8-1 pasting."

Radio Rights Not Renewed

They're Taking Dizzy's Microphone Away Again

St. Louis, Feb. 10 (AP).—Dizzy Dean may make a personal appearance tour instead of broadcasting baseball games next season.

The brewery that has the one-time St. Louis Cardinal pitching great under contract disclosed today it is not renewing its contract for broadcasting rights with the St. Louis Browns.

Dean and Johnny O'Hara broadcast all Browns games last season. Another brewery sponsoring another radio team has exclusive rights for broadcasting Cardinal games.

A spokesman for the brewery sponsoring Dean said its plans for Dean are uncertain at this time, but that the former pitcher's contract has "two or three years to run yet."

"There's a possibility that he might go around making public appearances for us," the spokesman said. "There has been no decision in the matter yet." He added the brewery was "unable to come to terms" in negotiations for a new contract with the Browns.

(Besides being a victim of an all-out attack by English teachers, Dizzy Dean hasn't had an exactly smooth career as a sports announcer.

(Last year, the St. Louis Cardinals sold broadcasting rights to another brewery and ole Diz was out in the cold—until his sponsor secured rights to air the Brown's games.

(Now it looks again like the good people of St. Louis no longer will hear such informative phrases as "he slud into third" and "he throwed him out at home."

Voyles Gets New 3-Year Contract From Dodgers

Brooklyn, Feb. 10 (AP).—Branch Rickey forgot baseball holdouts today long enough to set his football house in order.

First he announced the signing of Carl Voyles to a three-year contract as the Brooklyn Dodgers' head coach and directors of football. Then he called upon brother All America Conference owners to convince the rival National League and the public that it is here to stay.

These words of wisdom dropped from the lips of the busy deacon during the course of a noonday press conference and luncheon meeting of the Flatbush Gridiron Club.

Rickey, admittedly a man who wants "no truck with mediocrity," promised Brooklyn fans that happy days are coming for the grid Dodgers. He couldn't resist tossing in a few remarks about the baseball club.

12th for Quantico

The undefeated Quantico Marine Post High basketball team chalked up its 12th straight victory last night by whipping Aldie, Va., High, 48-17. Frank Watson was Quantico's leading scorer with 10 points.

Murray Gets Suspension Of 90 Days

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Heavyweight Lee Q. Murray, who has lasted less than four rounds in his last two fights, was dropped for a 90-day count by the District Boxing Commission yesterday.

Probing his suspicious one-round flop against Johnny Haynes, a Los Angeles unknown, at Turner's Arena Monday night, the commissioners suspended the nationally prominent fighter for three months for what they termed an "unsatisfactory performance."

His purse, amounting to less than $385, was released, but his suspension is effective in all 44 States which are members of the National Boxing Association.

Murray, 28, had only a polite "thank you" when Commissioners Tom Morgan and Clarence Talley announced their decision after a two-hour hearing.

Morgan and Talley said they had no reason to believe that Murray, a 5-1 favorite, had taken a "dive" against Haynes, but thought he was suffering from a "mental condition."

Needs Good Rest

"What he needs is a good rest," said the Commissioners who recently approved the Haynes match with the knowledge that less than three weeks ago he was floored 15 times in three rounds in Miami by one Syd Peaks.

"I just don't know what happened," Murray tried to explain. "I swear that I have never taken part in a fixed fight in my life. Ever since I boxed Shamus O'Brien (Murray won on a one-round K. O. December 23) I haven't felt right. I don't feel like fighting . . . I can't think."

The big Norwalk, Conn., fighter was unmarked. He looked dazed and befogged, doing more mumbling than speaking.

When asked why he, listed in the upper 10 among the heavyweights, accepted a match against an unknown like Haynes, Murray replied:

"A good heavyweight can't get fights with other good boys today unless he does business . . . they all want me to take part in a fix and I won't do it."

Fans Suspicious

Even before Referee Harry Volkman awarded Haynes a TKO 30 seconds before the first round was to end Monday night, cries of "he's drunk" and "he's been doped" rang through Turner's Arena. A medical examination of Murray by Dr. Don S. Knowlton, Boxing Commission physician, found no evidence of either.

Referee Volkman testified that in his six trips to the canvas before the bout was stopped, Murray went down "three times without a blow being landed."

"I don't know whether Murray took a dive or not," Volkman said, "because I have no proof. But this I do know: Murray didn't want to fight from the moment he entered the ring."

Just Shoved, He Says

Murray admitted that he went to the deck "three times without being hit, just shoved." He also admitted that Haynes hit "me a couple of hard punches to the head, but I've been hit much harder by others and come back. I just haven't been able to do anything for a month."

Murray's three-round stand in Miami against Peaks was not investigated officially, although there were rumors that he had been doped or was under the influence of intoxicants in that fight, also.

In response to a query from the local commissioners, Secretary Billy Regan of the Miami commission yesterday wired:

"My personal opinion is that Murray did his best in the (Peaks) fight, but it is also my personal opinion that he is washed up as a fighter and should be retired."

That seemed to be the opinion of everyone at yesterday's investigation except the commissioners who suggested that Murray be examined by a doctor for a possible "mental condition."

Caps Romp Over Providence, 79-60

Providence, Feb. 10.—Increasing their first-place lead in the Eastern Division of the Basketball Association of America, the Washington Capitols rolled to an easy 79-60 victory over the hapless Providence Steamrollers.

Aggies-Creighton Score Was 35-15

When the score of the Oklahoma A. & M.-Creighton basketball game was flashed over the wires Monday night, the Associated Press was deluged with requests for the final score, not the halftime result.

The AP bulletin had reported the result: Oklahoma A. & M., 35; Creighton, 15. But Hank Iba's Aggies had won by just that score. They just played their usual game of keeping the ball away from their opponents. The halftime score was A. & M., 13; Creighton, 6.

Lions Take 8-3 Beating

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Pittsburgh's flashy Hornets grabbed a fast lead and held it throughout to defeat the Washington Lions, 8-3, before a crowd of less than 1000 last night at Uline Arena.

Jack Hamilton, with three goals and a pair of assists and Mel Hill, who racked up two goals and three assists, paced the western division leaders' attack.

Before the Lions could get organized, the Tornets were off to a 5-0 lead. Stan Kemp, Scotty Mair and Jack Hamilton fired goals and Mel Hill collected a pair of tallies in the game's first 11 minutes.

Bud Foley finally notched the first Lion marker on a rebound and Walt Babey converted a perfect pass from Frank Porteous for the second Washington goal. But Hamilton scored again seven seconds before the first period ended to make it 6-2.

Hank Leaves Cleveland Still Unsigned

Cleveland, Feb. 10 (AP).—Hank Greenberg, who had been reported in line to sign with the Cleveland Indians, left town today for New York still a free agent, but tribe officials said a contract would be discussed again soon.

Tribe president Bill Veeck said he believed the big slugger wanted "a couple of days to think it over" and added further contract talks would be held at an early date.

Greenberg indicated last night he was on the verge of signing as a player-coach, but reported he wanted to make sure "my association won't be just a one-year proposition."

"We're farther ahead—at least closer to a decision," Veeck declared. "But it could go either way. I'm hoping and guessing he'll end up with us. I don't know how, but in some capacity.

"The trouble is, Hank doesn't exactly know what he wants so it's difficult for me to know what he wants."

Hank left town before he could be reached for comment by reporters, but earlier he had said he wanted to be connected with the operation of a big league club.

The 38-year-old player, who received his release from the Pittsburgh Pirates last fall, came here as Veeck's guest at a baseball writer's dinner last night in honor of tribe Manager Lou Boudreau.

In nine years with the Detroit Tigers, he was a three-time leader of the American League in circuit clouts.

Culberson, Difani Sign; Vernon Still Out of Fold

Outfielder Leon Culberson and Rookie Second Baseman Clarence Difani signed their 1948 contracts with the Nats yesterday, bringing to 25 the number of Washington players who have accepted terms.

Culberson, obtained from the Red Sox in the Stan Spence deal, is slated to be the club's centerfielder. He forwarded his contract from his Rome, Ga., home. Difani, drafted from Newark, batted .315 for Augusta, Ga., last year. He lives at Festus, Mo.

Still unsigned among the club's regulars are First Baseman Mickey Vernon, Outfielder Buddy Lewis, Third Baseman Eddie Yost, Shortstops Mark Christman and Johnny Sullivan and Pitcher Mickey Haefner.

Special Buses To Armory Games

The Capital Transit Co. has made arrangements to accommodate the record crowd that is expected to journey to the National Guard Armory tonight to see the intercollegiate basketball doubleheader of George Washington against Maryland and Georgetown against Penn State.

The B-2 buses (Nos. 30 and 91) from 17th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se., go within two blocks of the Armory. Connections with this bus line are made by streetcars No. 40 (East Capitol and 14th sts.) No 42 (12th and D sts. ne.) and Nos. 10 and 12 (13th and H sts. ne.)

YMCA Boxers Take Lead

Action was the keynote last night as the nineteenth annual AAU boxing tournament opened at Turner's Arena before 600 fans.

The 12th st. YMCA took an early lead in team scoring with four victories in the novice class.

Ten knockouts marked the first part of the program. In one of the features, Herbert Stowe of the 2th st Y slugged Ray Carter of Apollo, to the canvas in 1:25 of second round.

In an upset Bob Dailey of Barney, decisioned Ed Wowana of the National Guard, in a middleweight scrap. Dowana had been a semi-finalist in recent Golden Gloves Tourney.

NOVICE CLASS

126-POUND—Angele Evans (12th St. Y) defeated Bob Hailey (Police No. 2); Frank Tavenner (Olympic) scored TKO over Bob Holden (Merrick) in 33 seconds of first round; Willie Toop (12th St. Y) scored TKO over Crosby (Andrews Field) in 20 seconds of second round; Ted Morgal (Olympic) defeated Jim Beyer (Andrews Field).

FACE-SAVING ATTEMPT—Goalkeeper Wright of the Colchester, England, soccer team hits the mud with his face as he makes a futile attempt to prevent a score by the Blackpool team. Blackpool scored five goals to blank Colchester despite Wright's saves

On the Airlane

Georgetown's Tommy O'Keefe appeared with Bob Wolff on WINX; John Busick, GW public relations director, with Arch McDonald, WTOP; Ottis Zahn, GW coach, with Dutch Bergman, WRC; Elmer Ripley, Georgetown coach, with Bill Brundige, WOL, and Flucie Stewart, Maryland coach, with Steve Douglas, WRC.

Georgetown plays Penn State in the nightcap.

All three local teames worked ont at the spacious National Guard hall yesterday afternoon. Penn State moves in today.

Although George Washington has the best record of any of the four teams (15-5), Coach Otts Zahn thinks his Colonials have a 50-50 chance at best. Maryland, playing .500 ball, recently decisively defeated two Southern Conference teams that turned around and upset GW. They were Washington and Lee and South Carolina.

Stewart Scouted Colonials

Foxy Flucie Stewart, Maryland Coach and a football scout of some renown, hasn't missed a GW game that he possibly could make, thus the Colonials may not be able to surprise his Terrapins.

Yesterday, at the Armory practice session, Stewart said, "GW has an even offense. Except for Cantwell, all their boys score about the same number of points. I think that's going to make it tough for us—we'll have to keep a close guard on everyone."

Stewart continued, "They way we have the conference race doped out, we think we can make the playoffs if we're able to split with GW. I know my boys are anxious for a tourney berth and expect them to perform creditably."

Only thing bothering Maryland was the illness yesterday of Capt. Johnny Edwards. He complained of stomach pains and checked into the infirmary after the practice.

Lann vs. Moffatt

Interesting sidelight of the GW-Maryland game will be the personal battle between the Terps' Al Lann and the Colonials' Johnny Moffatt. Close friends, they led Tech to the Interhigh championship in their high school days. Tonight the play against each other for the first time. And they probably will be guarding each other.

Lann and Moffatt have reversed their schoolboy positions. Lann, former high scorer, now concentrates on a floor game. Moffatt, who was a defensive ace for Tech, is right behind Bill Cantwell for GW scoring honors.

John Lawther's Penn State team comes here with a 6-6 record and fresh from a 40-35 victory over Syracuse.

Georgetown has won nine against 11 losses. Penn State, though dangerous, should be a more welcome opponent than the two the Hoyas last faced. Holy Cross handed Ripley's men a 70-51 defeat and North Carolina State, highest scoring team in the Nation, ran over them, 87-46.

Reds Sell 'Bad Boy'

Miller Goes To Phils for Player, Cash

Philadelphia, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies today acquired baseball's current "bad boy"—Eddie Miller.

And Manager Ben Chapman quickly proclaimed:

"I don't care what he says. All he has to do is hit and field."

Owner Bob Carpenter swung the deal, the first since he took over front office duties upon death of General Manager Herb Pennock.

Eddie Criticized Manager

Carpenter said the deal followed a telephone conversation with Warren Giles, general manager of the Reds. The Phil boss would not say how much money was involved but stated it was "more than the $10,000 waiver price."

The 31-year-old Cincinnati shortstop jumped into print last month by publicly criticizing Manager Johnny Neun's field tactics and the playing value of some of his Cincinnati teammates.

Chapman elated to have Miller on his club, declared:

"He is the best shortstop in the National League. And his home run punch will be a big thing in our attack.

"He can talk as much as he wants off the field. It's the results on the field that count."

Miller Adds Punch

Carpenter said he was reluctant to give up Wyrostek, whom he termed one of the best defensive outfielders in the business.

"But," he added, "we need infield punch. And Miller gives us that."

Miller batted only .268 last year but hammered out 19 home runs and drove in 86 runs as the Reds finished in fifth place.

Wyrostek came to the Phillies in 1946 with Pitcher Al Jurisich in a cash deal with the St. Louis Cardinals. Johnny batted .273 last year, hit five home runs and drove in 51 runs.

It was the second deal between the Phils and the Reds during the winter off-season. Earlier, the Phils had traded Pitcher Tommy Hughes for Bert Haas, outfielder and third-first baseman, and another player who has not yet been named.

Phils Have Four Shortstops

The addition of Miller gives the Phils four shortstops, Jackie Albright and Ralph La Pointe, both of whom impressed as rookies last year, will go to Clearwater, Fla., for spring training along with Gran Hamner, up from Utica of the Eastern League.

Chapman insisted that "every job on the club is still open." But baseball men believed he might experiment with Miller at third base, allowing one of his younger men to hold the shortstop assignment.

Miller broke into major league ball in 1936 with Cincinnati, went to Boston in 1939 and remained with the Braves until 1943 when he was shipped back to Cincinnati.

He set a National League fielding mark in 1942 with an average of .983. His highest batting average in the majors was .276 in 1940 with Boston.

Gretchen Merrill Won't Appear in World Tests

Davos, Switzerland, Feb. 10 (U.P.) Gretchen Merrill of Boston, who finished eighth in the women's Olympic figure skating competition, said tonight that she is withdrawing from the world championships which start tomorrow because "I'm overtrained and overtired."

"I cannot take another stretch of top-class competition so soon after the Olympics," the five-time United States women's figure skating titleholder told Harry Keighley, manager of the American Olympic squad.

Early Lead Gives Barons 12th Victory

Rolling up an 11-2 lead in the first quarter, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's Baron drubbed Roosevelt's Rough Rider, 47-29, yesterday at the B.-C. C. gym.

It was the second meeting between the two this season. Bethesda also won the last time, 35-29. However, yesterday's win snapped a nine-game victory string for Roosevelt, and was Bethesda's fourth in a row. The Barons now have a 12-3 record compared to 10-5 for Roosevelt.

Celebrating their winning of the Montgomery County championship last Friday, the Barons had little trouble staying ahead of Roosevelt.

Across the Nation:

Northfield, Minn., Feb. 10 (AP). Bruce Smith, former University of Minnesota football star, said today he would probably decide late this week whether to play football again next season with the Green Bay Packers or join the Minnesota coaching staff.

Smith talked with Bernie Bierman, Minnesota head coach last week. Today Curley Lambeau of the Packers revealed in Los Angeles that he had made Smith an offer for the 1948 season.

BAA, National Squabbling

Milwaukee, Feb. 10 (AP).—A couple of national basketball league managers will be more than surprised—and said so today emphatically—if the circuit breaks up and several members join a rival loop.

"Our fellows will stick together," declared Lon Darling, manager of the Oshkosh All-stars, commenting on a New York talk by the President Maruice Podoloff of the Basketball Association of America yesterday. Podoloff hinted that Indianapolis, Fort Wayne and Minneapolis were ready to desert the senior professional league.

"We're 100 per cent National Legaue," seconded Les Harrison, manager of the Rochester Royals, who meet Darling's Club tonight.

Blame for the situation, which Darling said "means another war," was laid to the Minneapolis Club.

"Minneapolis has turned out to be a trouble maker," Darling said. "It's the only one in the league which has been flirting with the BAA."

Gilmer Returns To Birmingham—With Redskins

Less than six weeks after donning a Washington Redskin uniform, Harry Gilmer, passing pride of Alabama, will be playing football in Birmingham again.

The 'Skins yesterday announced a September 11 preseason game in the Southern city, the Green Bay Packers furnishing opposition in Gilmer's home town instead of in Milwaukee.

The third 1948 exhibition for the Redskins thus is planned for a Birmingham stadium which seats 40,000. Negotiations for the game have been under way for some time, promoted by Birmingham groups anxious to see Gilmer, their favorite son, in professional action.

After training at Occidental College the 'Skins will launch preseason play against the Rams in Los Angeles. A Denver meeting with the Detroit Lions follows, then Birmingham, and finally an annual Baltimore clash, this time with the Chicago Bears. The regular season opens at home against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Redskins yesterday announced the signing of their twenty-fourth player for '48. He's Tommy Mont, former Maryland University quarterback who'll be used as a defensive halfback.

Cerdan, Roach Fight March 12

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Marcel Cerdan, European middleweight champion, and Lavern Roach of Plainview, Tex., today were signed for a 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden March 12, the Twentieth Century Sporting Club announced.

Cerdan, a top ranking contender for the 160-pound title, knocked out Jean Walzack of France in Paris last night. Roach, named boxing's "rookie of the year," for his performances in 1947, agreed yesterday to meet Al Thornton of Rochester, Pa., in a ten at Miami February 19.

Terp Boxers In Doubleheader

University of Maryland Boxers will stage a ring doubleheader Saturday night at the College Park coliseum, meeting teams from Clemson and from American University.

Against Clemson, coach Heinie Miller will start almost the same squad which won Southern Conference and Sugar Bowl championships. A team composed mostly of Maryland intra-mural champs will face the American U. Eagles.

Rayner Recalled

Another Bowl Game

Babe Tells His Story

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Babe Ruth was no orphan. His father's name always was Ruth and not Ehrhardt or Gearhardt As a juvenile incorrigible, he was placed in a Baltimore institution.

These are a few facts the Babe tells of his youth in the first of a series of autobigraphical sketches wi.. Bob Considine. The series, appearing in the Saturday Evening Post, is a condensation of a book to be published. This, in turn, will be the basis for a motion picture of his life.

Brundage Food Offer

London, Feb. 10 (AP).—Avery Brundage, American Olympics chief, offered to feed the 400 athletes he will bring to Britain for the summer Olympics.

Brundage, accompanied by Owen Van Camp, treasurer of the United States Olympic committee, told British officials he would ship frozen food from America.

Texas Back Goes to Bears

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—Billy Joe Baumgardner, former University of Texas halfback, today signed a 1948 contract iwth the Chicago Bears of the National Foootball League.

Baumgardner, also a track star, was regarded as one of the Southwest's fastest backs.

VA to Have More Jobs in Spite of Planned 8500 Cut

VA: Veterans Administration is likely to have more employes both here and in its field service by midsummer than it has now, even though it goes through with its plans to wipe out 8500 jobs before June 30. Briefly, this is the picture:

VA employment will slump a bit between now and June 30 and then grow to a level higher than it is now, because:

VA plans to move back here from New York about 1100 jobs in its insurance offices. A check shows that no more than 350 of the New York employes would transfer here with their jobs. So, about 700 people would have to be recruited here for that work.

Yesterday's announcement by VA said that 1650 of the 8500 jobs to be abolished are in the central office. But the bulk of these "central office" jobs to be eliminated are in New York. Only 727 are in this city, and no more than 400 now are filled. In other words, more than 300 jobs are vacant, and others will be vacated by turnover.

The over-all slash of 8500 jobs will apply only to nonmedical posts. On January 1, there were 100,458 medical employes. VA's 1949 budget calls for a staff of 121,634 medical employes in the fiscal year to start July 1, an increase of 21,196, which would more than offset the 8500 layoff.

VA Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., said the layoff was ordered to get his administrative services in line with a smaller 1949 budget. He added that the VA staff would be stabilized by making gradual reductions before the budget became effective.

The 13 branch offices must take the biggest slash, 6810 employes. These offices now have about 78,000 employes. Among the reductions ordered are:

Five hundred and fifty personnel; 500 in construction, supply and real estate services; 150 in administrative services; 750 in contact services; 800 in claims; 125 in insurance; 4000 in vocational rehabilitation and education services; 50 in special services (and an increase of 150 in loan guaranty service). Insurance offices in both New York and this city have a combined reduction of 375.

Among the reductions to be made here are personnel, 100; claims, 200; contact and administrative services, 75, and 35 in vocational rehabilitation and educational services.

POST OFFICE: Two more able career men have been promoted in this department. SAMUEL R. YOUNG, 51, who entered the postal service in 1918, was sworn in yesterday as executive assistant to the Postmaster General. HAROLD F. AMBROSE, 37, a former Boston newspaperman who became a postal employe in 1933, was sworn in as administrative assistant. Incidentally, the promotion for Young takes him out of the running for the city postmaster position.

CAA: Commerce Secretary Harriman is reported to have recommended that Deputy Administrator F. B. LEE be appointed administrator of Civil Aeronautics Authority. California members of Congress are supporting JOE MARRIOTT, CAA's Los Angeles regional director.

Meantime, RICHARD E. ELWELL, CAA's general counsel and another Californian, is being boomed for a promotion. He's reported slated for either a seat on the Civil Aeronautics Board, or as the United States representative to the International Aviation Organization to replace LIEUTENANT GENERAL KUTER.

STORY: I'm now convinced that Senator Taft has a sense of humor. The other evening Chairman Tobey of the Senate Banking Committee, was overheard discussing the commodity market slump with the GOP presidential possibility. Tobey appeared concerned over the sharp downward trend, but Taft broke in to say:

"I can explain the commodity market slump—Ed Pauley finally decided to unload his holdings."

PS: Taft was referring to the former Army official who made nearly a million dollars in the commodity markets during the past two years.

RETIREMENT: We're still taking orders for the free booklet that will explain the new retirement bill. A card addressed to me in care of The Washington Post will get you a copy. No stamps or self-addressed envelopes are necessary. The copies won't be mailed out until after the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill is signed into law.

PAY RAISES: Pay raise hearings yesterday came to an end before a Senate Civil Service subcommittee. Since Chairman Langer was the only member present, no attempt was made to agree on a bill to be reported to the full committee. Besides Langer, subcommittee members are Senators Flanders (R., Vt.) and Chavez (D., N. Mex.).

The last and only witness yesterday was Ethel Hoover, chief of the consumer price section of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. She told how taxes were taking a larger and larger share of the worker's salary.

Mrs. Hoover said a BLS study showed that a family of four here needed a minimum budget of $3500. Langer then suggested that a Federal worker with an $1800 salary needed a pay raise of around $1600.

"The idea of this legislation," he said, "is to raise salaries to the point where Federal workers have a decent standard of living. If it takes $1500 or $1700 to do this in some cases, then I'm for it."

More Cooks At Gallinger To Be Asked By Mason

D. C. Commissioner Also Will Seek Reclassification Of Dietitians' Jobs

Commissioner Guyy Mason said last night he will ask his fellow Commissioners to approve hiring four more cooks and "several" more dietitians for Gallinger Hospital.

He said this after discussing Gallinger's "food situation" with Acting Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger and Gallinger Superintendent Alvin R. Sweeney.

Need for additional personnel was stressed in a recent report signed by the Hospital's department heads. They made a food survey after Dr. Sol Katz, head of the tuberculosis department, charged patients' recovery was retarded due to improper food.

Mason said he also will seek reclassification of dietitians' jobs from "sub-professionals" to "professional' civil service ratings in order to attract personnel.

Unexpended personnel appropriations may be available to pay for the new cooks and dietitians, he added.

Mason said Sweeney and Seckinger had made some "good" suggestions for improving Gallinger's food service and were already carrying out other improvements, but declined to reveal details.

Commenting briefly on Monday's report by the Board of Visitors to Municipal Hospitals, which said Gallinger was doing a good job despite low funds, Mason said the hospital's budget requests were cut because officials "didn't justify what they put in for."

Sweeney told reporters he would seek "relaxation" of a January 28 Commissioners' order that all patients picked up in District ambulances be taken to Gallinger except in emergency.

Sweeney said patients in the surgery wards have almost doubled since the order was passed. Approximately 249 patients are now being cared for in wards with 200-bed capacity, he said.

Keneipp Sees City Parking Possibility

Municipally-built facilities may be the answer to Washington's parking troubles, Traffic Director George Keneipp said yesterday.

He favors permitting "private enterprise" to do the work—as proposed by the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency—but added:

"If they can't do the job, then something else will have to be done."

Keneipp, a member of the parking agency, placed these questions before a luncheon meeting of the Civitan Club, in Hotel Mayflower:

"1. Will private enterprise come forward with the capital to build the necessary off-street facilities in this area . . . ?

2. How much longer shall we wait to decide whether these facilities will be constructed by private operators or by the District?

Later Keneipp said he would give private interests just two more years to do the job, pointing out that the "situation is not getting better."

On Monday, P. Y. K. Howat, head of the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, blasted municipally-owned parking facilities as "socialistic" and held that private interests should and would handle the problem satisfactorily here.

Keneipp recommended that, without limiting the number of operators, a limitation be imposed on the number of taxicabs.

Taxicab Cruising

"If not," he said, there should be a "limitation on the number permitted to cruise within certain zones." He said 5978 vehicles pass on 14th st. between Pennsylvania ave. and F st. nw. in an eight-hour period, and 35 per cent are cabs.

He also suggested that zoning regulations be amended to "require provision for off-street commercial loading facilities in all future commercial construction."

The traffic department's program for 1948, he revealed calls for its central control system to "get under way," more parking meters, continued "sign modernization," 4000 new reflectorized U. S. route markers, and 12 new signal installations at bad intersections.

Traffic Class Wins Freedom For Speeders

Two motorists who attended traffic school after their arrests for speeding were given suspended sentences yesterday, but Municipal Court indicated it will be the exception rather than the rule.

William E. Billingsley, 33, of Takoma Park, Md., and Frank D. Collins, 37, of 5523 Brite dr., Bethesda, Md., were convicted of speeding last month. They elected to attend the school and appear for sentencing later.

In suspending their sentences, Judge Aubrey Fennell said he urged attendance at the school "to increase the public's traffic consciousness," but that disposition of the two cases did not establish a precedent.

Voteless Residents Have Their Say at Home Rule Hearing

Early Rule Bill Action Sought

for the District. I only hope that the home-rule measure will not slow down those who are working for an eventual change in the Constitution (to give national suffrage). However, as I am fully convinced that another form of government than the present one is imperative for the District, and as this seems the best bill that we can get for the moment, I am for it. I am only sorry that it does not go further. It is certainly a step in the right direction and it should make people more civic-conscious and increase their feeling of citizenship."

Mrs. Peter told the committee that while she was a native of Washington she had enjoyed the experience of voting in Lexington, Va., for several years. She explained that one of her ancestors was Robert Peter, first mayor of Georgetown. Her father, G. T. Dunlop, founded the Capital Traction Co., forerunner of Capital Transit. She said neither her father, nor her husband, the late Walter G. Peter, prominent architect, had ever voted.

"I love Washington," she said, "but I have always felt we should attend to our own affairs. This bill seems to me a step in the right direction. I hope very much that the bill will pass and that we'll carry out the principles for which the Revolutionary War was fought, that there should not be taxation without representation."

Others who strongly urged the home-rule plan included Clifford H. Newell, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; George W. Absher, president of Hillcrest Citizens, and Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board.

Wender's main testimony, however, opposed the bill's plan to scrap the present separate administrative recreation board, in favor of one-man control. He said administrative boards are used in a majority of cities to run recreation programs.

Among those who opposed the home-rule plan was Jerome B. McKee, chairman of the legislative committee of the District Department of the American Legion. He said the department would be asked to pass on the plan at its convention later this month.

McKee presented a statement for his committee opposing the Auchincloss-Ball bill "in toto." He said organized minority groups could control the proposed city council. He questioned whether the bill would give real home rule, but charged that it would give a "blank check" for the spending of District taxpayers' money.

W. H. Lowder of 1533 Rosedale st. ne. urged that the District government be left as it is, and said "I think the District Commissioners have done a darn good job; let's just leave well enough alone."

Mrs. B. G. McIlwee, 507 Quackenbos st. nw., opposed the bill and counseled delay "until we get a Republican President in the White House." Representative Charles B. Deane (D., N. C.) acting chairman, replied that the record should show that three Democrats were at that moment the only committee members present.

In other testimony:

1. Interior Secretary Krug attacked the plan in the bill to transfer Federal parks here which are mainly recreational to the District. He proposed instead, that the Federal Government buy from the District its share in the park system, and operate all parks in the District entirely with Federal funds. Krug also opposed the bill's plan to merge the Park Police with the Metropolitan Police. His views were presented by Irving O. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and Edward J. Kelly, special assistant to Root.

2. A. Oliver Thornton, First Deputy District Recorder of Deeds, opposed the plan in the bill to place that office in the proposed District law department, with the recorder appointed by the director of the department. The recorder is now appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Thornton also charged the proposed council would not give the city truly representative government.

3. Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the Security Savings and Commercial Bank of Washington, and legislative committee chairman of the District Bankers Association; and C. Clinton James, counsel for the District Banking and Loan League; opposed provisions of the bill which would transfer to the District functions of supervising Washington financial institutions now performed by the Comptroller of the Currency. They urged keeping the present system.

4. Edward J. Schmuch, general counsel of the Acacia Life Insurance Co., testifying as spokesman for the District insurance industry generally, opposed the bill's provision to abolish the District Insurance Department and transfer its functions to a District department of commerce.

5. Robert C. Thompson, Maryland director of vocational rehabilitation, indorsed the bill's plan to shift rehabilitation services here from Federal to District control, but said it should be run by the school board, not made part of a labor department as the bill now proposes.

6. Mrs. Alma T. Opal, representing several humane and anti-vivisection groups, opposed the bill's plan to transfer the District Pound to a department of public safety. Auchincloss declared the pound is now humanely and satisfactorily run, and the bill would not disturb that. He said it might be well in Washington to let the humane societies take over the disposition of impounded animals.

Blood Stains Matched in Rowell Death

Blood stains found on the clothing of Nixon McGuire, 36, matched the blood type of Mrs. Theodora Rowell, 35, McGuire's paramour whom he is accused of slaying last September 10.

This was brought out in District Court yesterday as Prosecutor Andrew Oehmann rested his manslaughter case against McGuire.

Death Due to Blow

Rosenberg also told the court an autopsy showed that Mrs. Rowell's death was caused by a brain hemorrhage induced by a blow.

Detective Sergt. Robert E. Talbot, homicide squad, told how he entered the basement apartment at 1919 I st. nw., shared by McGuire and Mrs. Rowell, at 3 a. m. September 10. This was shortly after McGuire had reported the woman was dead at that address.

Talbot said he found the woman sprawled across the bed unconscious. Her face was bruised, he said. The detective testified McGuire told him that he had been asleep when Mrs. Rowell came in and waked him to offer a drink.

Talbot said McGuire declared he then went back to sleep, awakened at 2:30 a. m. and discovered Mrs. Rowell was dead when he leaned over to kiss her.

Another witness, Ethel M. Bolac, who lives in the I st. apartment building, testified that she had heard McGuire and Mrs. Rowell quarreling over money several days before.

Mrs. Rowell, formerly a phone operator at the Shoreham Hotel, had left her husband, Troy, eight months before the slaying.

Combat Hero Lost in Plane

Fort Bragg, N. C., Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Hope was virtually abandoned today for Lieut Col. John F. Martin, and Army war hero whose P-47 fighter plane disappeared Sunday 35 miles from the Atlantic shore.

The Richmond, Va., Air Force base, which Martin left last week on a training flight to Tampa, Fla., said he did not take a raft or lifebelt.

Martin, who won 23 decorations in combat, was a native of Culpeper, Va., and chief air instructor of the Virginia National Guard at Richmond, until last August. He moved with his wife and 18-month-old son to Charlottesville, Va., to study electrical engineering.

Board Opposes New Arlington Taxing Powers

Arlington's Board of Trade yesterday announced its "unanimous" opposition to a bill allowing the county to levy business license taxes.

The move put the board at opposite poles from the Arlington Chamber of Commerce board of directors, which recently gave its blessing to the enabling legislation introduced last Wednesday in the Virginia General Assembly.

As sponsored by Delegate J. Maynard Magruder, the measure would give Arlington the general taxing powers of a city, including levies for business, professional and merchant licenses.

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Paul Hill recently said such a bill would net the county an estimated $300,000 to $500,000 more annually.

The Board of Trade gave three major reasons for its opposition:

1. Such additional business taxation would be "unwise" at this time in view of the recent increase in property taxes, rise in the cost of living, and in view of a possible business recession.

2. County residents have received "little or no advance notice" of the proposed legislation, have had no opportunity to consider its merits.

3. The cost of local government has increased to such a point "that it is getting out of all reasonable relationship to incomes of businesses and citizens alike."

The board urged that Government expenses be reduced before the tax "burden upon the people" is increased further.

Magruder, fellow-delegate Geo Magruder, fellow-delegate George Damm, and Senator Charles R. Fenwick were urged in the board resolution to withdraw the enabling bill from the current legislative session.

Nomination Of Tamm Opposed by District Bar

Truman's Choice Of No. 2 G-Man For Judgeship Rejected, 928-173

The District Bar Association yesterday overwhelmingly voted opposition to the nomination of G-Man Edward Allen Tamm to the bench of the U. S. District Court here.

A poll of the membership, taken by mail over the weekend and tallied yesterday, disclosed 928 local attorneys opposed to the nomination, 173 in favor, 99 having no stand. Nine ballots were disqualified because they were improperly marked.

Altogether 1902 ballots were sent out to bar members by the judicial selections committee. There were 1209 returns, the largest response to a poll in recent years, according to the committee.

As a result of the poll, the committee will officially oppose the confirmation of Tamm when the Senate Judiciary Committee holds hearings on the White House nominee February 18.

Tamm, 41-year-old assistant to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, was nominated last week by President Truman to fill the vacancy on the District Court bench created by the elevation of Justice James M. Proctor to the United States Court of Appeals. The appointment is for life at $15,000 a year, but must be confirmed by the Senate.

A graduate of Georgetown University law school in 1930, Tamm is not a member of the local bar. He was admitted to the bar of Minnesota, his native State, in 1943, and was admitted to the United States Supreme Court bar in February, 1947. He applied for admission to the local bar last year but under District rules is ineligible to gain admission without examination until July 6, 1948.

A career man in the FBI, Tamm as Hoover's assistant has been the Nation's No. 3 G-man and has handled both criminal and civilian cases for the FBI. His judicial appointment has been strongly indorsed by Attorney General Tom Clark.

On Study Program

High School Unit Rejects Miller Bill

The Calvin Coolidge High School Home and School Association said yesterday it opposes congressional interference in high school programs.

The view was contained in a resolution passed by the executive committee of the association and sent to Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), author of a bill to require local high school students to study United States history for three years and the Constitution for two.

The parents said they oppose any plan "which would set up, by legislative enactment, specific curriculum requirements."

"It has long been recognized that this is a prerogative of the Board of Education and is a matter which can best be regulated by the local authorities in control of the schools," the statement said.

The association expressed confidence in the Board of Education, school officers and teachers and said that present courses in United States history and the Constitution are "thorough and patriotic."

At present, high school students are required to take a one-year course in American history which contains a six-week-unit study of the Constitution.

The proposed plan, the resolution said, would "throw the senior high school curriculum out of balance."

Ten of 24 semester credits normally earned by students in senior high schools would be allocated to the study of United States history and the Constitution, the parents said.

Fast Ride to Hospital Saves Choking Baby

The Washington Post
ROBERT SELKER

A 19-month-old toddler, rushed to Childrens Hospital yesterday afternoon under police escort with a foreign object caught in his throat, last night was playing cheerfully in his Fort Washington, Md., home—none the worse for the experience.

Physicians at the hospital, unable to remove the object, forced it down the child's throat and into his stomach, where it will soon be eliminated.

Robert K. Selker, infant son of William Selker, 30, a draftsman for the National Park Service, put the object into his mouth while at play with his four-year-old sister, Patty Ann, in the front yard, according to his parents.

When he began to choke, Patty Ann brought him into the house. Unable to aid him, Mrs. Selker drove the lad 15 miles to the office of an Anacostia physician, and from there to the hospital under police escort.

Within a short time after the object had passed down his throat, the boy was on the way to recovery.

Neither Selker nor the hospital physicians knew what the boy had been choking on, but Selker surmised it to be "a pine needle or a twig."

Earthquake Noted

The quake, "enough to cause considerable damage if it occurred in a populated area," officials said, probably hit in the general area of Turkey.

Envoy's Wife Trapped

There was no fire at the Argentine Embassy last night when Fire Truck Co. Noo 2 pulled up outside—it was the ambassador's wife, Senora Maria Esther de Ivanissevich, trapped in an elevator.

Firemen said the elevator at the embassy, 1600 New Hampshire ave. nw., stuck between the second and third floors, trapped Senora de Ivanissevich for about 15 minutes.

Firemen removed the elevator door on the second floor and helped her make a 4-foot descent.

Stabbing Holds Va. Man

William Green, 47, who lives in the Mutual Ice Co. building, 900 block N. Henry st., Alexandria, was held for action of the Alexandria grand jury yesterday on a charge of stabbing Samuel Moore, of the same address, with an ice pick. Green pleaded guilty before Civil and Police Court Judge James R. Duncan and was held on $10,000 bond.

School Contract Let

The Commissioners yesterday awarded a $45,500 contract for converting E. V. Brown School, 6501 Connecticut ave. nw., into a library and recreation center. The contract will go to Rogers & McGrath, 132 3d st. se., lowest of six bidders, they announced.

Injured by Locomotive

Annunzio Florimbio, 66, of 1917 N. Capitol st., an employe of the Washington Terminal Co., suffered undetermined injuries yesterday when struck by a locomotive.

He was working in the 5th and T st. ne., yards when the C. & O. engine backed up and struck him. He was taken to Emergency Hospital with fractured ribs and a possible fracture of the right hip.

17 Reservists on Cruise

Seventeen naval reservists from Greater Washington are aboard the USS Taconic on a 26-day training cruise. The ship, flagship of Rear Admiral R. O. Davis, commander of the Atlantic Fleet Amphibious Force, will join the main task force for Caribbean maneuvers during February and March. It left Norfolk, Va., on Thursday.

Two Workers Overcome

Two tilesetters working in the basement of St. John's Episcopal Church, Bradley Lane and Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, yesterday were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from a portable heating unit. Admitted for overnight treatment at Suburban Hospital was Charles Goodheart, 45, of 1721 38th st. se.; Willie Valentine, 23, of 1340 Corcoran st. nw., was treated and released.

War Bride Heads Home

A French war bride's dream of returning home, dimmed when her husband took the $300 she had saved, brightened again yesterday.

Mrs. Leroy Kane, of 2017 3d st. ne., who will start for home today, cleared up a robbery report for police after her husband said two armed men had taken the money from him.

He had purchased before the "robbery," however, her ticket—for $198. His brother made restitution, but Kane forfeited $25 collateral on a charge of making a false report to police.

Dog's Bark Costs $15

Municipal Court yesterday put the legal bite—$15—on Andrew Fraser, 3125 38th st. nw., for the bark of his dog.

Six neighbors testified that the bark of "Abraghean," an Irish setter, was as soothing as a lullaby, when audible, which they said was hardly ever.

But Judge Nadine Gallagher was apparently persuaded by six others who complained against the dog's early morning barking.

Rents Reported Stolen

The Morris Cafritz Co., 14th and K sts. nw., yesterday told police an apartment manager had absconded with $1500 in rent receipts, leaving a note saying she had "gone to Cuba." The employe, a 43-year-old woman, was bonded, they said.

New Smell Now

Angelique Perfume Co. of Wilton, Conn., trying to popularize "Black Satin" perfume for Jelleff's Inc., plans to try to create a perfume-scented snowstorm over the city this afternoon.

A plane with the necessary dry ice—and perfume—will take off from Hybla Valley Airport at 2:30 p. m.

But the United Press reported, in a similar stunt yesterday at Bridgeport, Conn., the sweet-smelling snow created by dumping the dry ice out of the plane never got to the ground.

Karl Holer Rites Today; D. C. Composer

Funeral services for Karl E. Holer, 68, composer and organist of the First Evangelical and Reformed Church for more than 45 years, who died Monday morning at Gallinger Hospital, will be held today at 8 p. m. at Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be private.

A native of Washington, Mr. Holer was born on December 10, 1879. He was the son of Prof. Emil A. Holer, a founder of the District's first boys' orchestra about 1878, and Mrs. Elise Holer. Mr. Holer studied music under his father, who also was a music teacher, singer and composer. Karl E. Holer later studied with another Washington teacher, John Theophile.

He was an honorary member of the District Federation of Music Clubs, a charter member of the Musicians Protective Association, Local 161; treasurer of the Washington Music Teachers Association, Inc.; a member of the church where he was organist and a member of the District Organ Guild.

Mr. Holer was director of the former Arion Singing Society, a group of German male singers, and a former faculty member of the Washington Musical Institute, 1730 16th st. nw. During the past five years he devoted most of his time to composition and arranging music, retaining only a few of his students. His published works during this period include solos for women's voices, anthems for choirs and a Christmas solo, The Advent. Mr. Holer's arranagement for a soprano solo of the familiar hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee", with members of the choir singing softly "Abide With Me" will be sung at the funeral.

Dr. Clark, D. C. Dentist, Is Dead at 88

Dr. Egbert A. Clark, 88, believed to have been the oldest practicing dentist in the District, died unexpectedly yesterday at Garfield Hospital after a brief illness.

A native of Canada, Dr. Clark began his practice here in the 1890's. He was treating patients in his office at the Medical Science Building as late as last Wednesday, the day he was stricken. He was a graduate of Temple University.

One of the pioneer boatsmen in this area, he helped organize the now-defunct Analostan Boat Club. Dr. Clark was also a charter member of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church and belonged to the Canadian Club of this city.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Leech Clark of 6007 Wilson lane, Bethesda, Md., and a son, E. Kent Clark of Penn Wynne, Pa.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 p. m. Thursday at the William Reuben Pumphrey Funeral Home, 7557 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, Md.

D. C. Speleological Group to Explore 'Schoolhouse Cave'

By The Associated Press

The National Speleological Society of Washington will explore "Schoolhouse Cave" in Pendleton County, W. Va., one of the State's natural wonders, for the second time Saturday and Sunday.

The speleologists, or "wild cave explorers," first entered the cavern in 1939, Director W. C. Handlan of the West Virginia Industrial and Publicity Commission, said.

They reached a point 800 feet from the entrance, where the passage widens and drops out of sight into a huge pitted room 180 feet deep. The objective of the second expedition is to explore that part of the cavern floor.

J. J. Wilson, jr., of Bethesda, Md., will head the expedition. Others expected to make the trip include: Dr. William W. Welsh of Rockville, Md.; John Fishburn of Kensington, Md.; John Petrie of Arlington, Va.; John F. Meenehan, a photographer of Washington, and groups from Cleveland and Steubenville, Ohio, and Richmond, Va.

To Study Empire Report

A preliminary draft of a report on the cause of the collapse of the Empire Building will be considered today by the special five-man committe investigating the disaster, Stewart Beall, committee chairman, said yesterday.

The meeting will be held in the District Building in the office of Robert H. Davis, District director of inspections, who is on the committee.

Bob Tells One to the Ad Clubbers

Jury Weighs Case Against Taxi Driver

A District Court jury today continued deliberating charges that a Washington cab driver imposed on the friendship of a 27-year-old St. Elizabeths nurse to the extent of $475.

Specifically, Prosecutor Sidney Sachs charged that the taxi driver, Henri Gasque, 37, of 111 Massachusetts ave. nw., father of seven children, secured the money from the nurse, Thelma R. Sidberry, in a phony cab fleet deal.

According to Miss Sidberry she met Gasque about a year ago when she hailed his cab outside the hospital. A friendship resulted, she said, and one day while viewing the Tidal Basin cherry blossoms, Gasque proposed that she buy a third interest in a 4-cab fleet he said he owned. She said she gave him $90 on that day and other payments of $85 and $300 subsequently.

The Government charges Gasque was only manager and that the four cabs were owned by a couple of other persons.

The defendant testified the money had been pressed on him by Miss Sidberry as "gifts." The case was placed in the jury's hands at 3 p. m. yesterday. The jurors were excused for the night at 6:30 p. m. without reaching a verdict.

Mrs. Printup, Former Army Employe, Dies

Mrs. Lura H. Printup, former welfare director for the Bureau of Ordnance of the War Department, died Monday at a nursing home near Baltimore.

Mrs. Printup

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be private.

Mrs. Printup, who was 89, was a native of Jonesboro, Tenn., and later went to Rome, Ga., as the bride of Joseph P. Printup. Soon after 1900 the Printups moved to Washington.

In 1917, after the death of her husband, Mrs. Printup took the civil service examination for post of Ordnance Welfare Director. She served in that capacity until her retirement in 1942.

During World War I, Mrs. Printup conducted a girls' rooming club on I st., a social club and convalescent home for girls. A few years later she established the first cafeteria for the Ordnance Bureau.

She was a charter member of the Mount Pleasant M. E. Church South, now known as the Francis Asbury Church, and was first president of the church's missionary society.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. R. K. Helphenstine, jr. of Chevy Chase, and a sister, Mrs. Anna H. McCall, Middletown, Conn.

A. B. Butrick, Treasury Aide 32 Years, Dies

Arthur B. Butrick, 57, a Treasury Department purchasing officer for 32 years, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital after a cerebral hemorrage.

A resident of Washington since 1911, Mr. Butrick retired from the Treasury Deparment, where he was in the bureau of supply, about four years ago due to a heart ailment. He lived at 1332 Ingraham st. nw.

Mr. Butrick was born in Haverhill, Mass. He was a past master of Dawson Lodge of Masons, and belonged to Mount Vernon Chapter, Royal Lodge of Masons and the Numismatic Society of Washington.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ruth L. Butrick, a son Robert, and a daughter, Miss Ruth Butrick.

Funreal services will be held at his residence tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

R. J. Denehan, Broker, Dies After Illness

Raymond J. Denahan, 50, insurance broker, of 5009 Rugby ave., Bethesda, Md., died yesterday morning at Doctors Hospital after a three-month illness.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 10 a. m. from Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Bethesda. Interment will be in Washington National Cemetary.

Born in Yardley, Pa., November 26, 1897, he attended local schools there and was graduated from Rider Moore Stewart College in Trenton, N. J.

A resident of the Washington area for more than 30 years, he had been associated for the past few years with the A. H. Baker Co. He was a member of the Washington Board of Trade, Insurance Club of Washington, National Skeet Club, St. Ann's Bowling League, and the Elks.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Albina M. Denahan, a daughter, Miss Dolores Rose Denahan of the Bethesda address; his mother, Mrs. Ellie R. Denahan of Washington Crossing, Penna., and two brothers, Eugene and Earl Denahan, both of Trenton, N. J.

Robert G. Anthony

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 10.—Funeral services were held at Carmel Methodist Church today at 2 p. m. for Robert G. Anthony, 80, a merchant at Hague, Westmoreland County, for 44 years, who died Sunday at his home.

Surviving are his wife, a daughter and two sons.

Va. Funeral Tomorrow for James Spicer

Funeral services for James Albert Spicer, Virginia's oldest Confederate veteran who died at his home here Monday night at the age of 103, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Walkers Methodist Church in Madison County, Va. Burial will be in the church yard.

Mr. Spicer, a retired miller, had lived with his daughter, Mrs. Harry Lushbaugh at 7115 9th st. nw. since coming to Washington in 1942.

A native of Slate Mills, Culpeper County, Va., he fought with Pickett's Division and served in the Seventh Virginia Regiment under Gen. John S. Mosby in the Cedar Mount and Petersburg campaigns.

With Mr. Spicer's death, Virginia pension officials said only seven Civil War veterans remain on that State's pension rolls. One Confederate veteran, John Shaw, who died recently at the age of 106, lived longer than Mr. Spicer, the officials said.

The aged veteran, who would have been 104 in May, didn't give up his favorite sports, hunting and fishing, until he reached 100. He passed much of his time reading and was proud of being able to see without glasses.

Besides Mrs. Lushbaugh, he is survived by another daughter, Mrs. G. William Smith of Orange, Va.—where he had operated a corn mill prior to coming to the District—and two sons, Bryant S., of Baltimore, and Elliott W. Spicer of Washington.

Harry D. Seakford

New Market, Va., Feb. 10 (Spl.). Funeral services were held Monday at Alma in Page County for Harry David Seakford, 73, an employe of the New Market branch of the Rockingham Poultry Cooperative.

Mr. Seakford is survived by his wife, Mrs. Flora Seakford, and the following children: Wilmer, Stanley, Oliver, Harry and Forest Seakford of New Market, Mrs. Rada Kline, Mount Jackson; Floyd Seakford, Granville Seakford and Mrs. Dorothy Lewis of New Market.

Julius W. Estep

New Market, Va., Feb. 10 (Spl.). Funeral services were held at Solomon's Lutheran Church, near Mount Jackson, today for Julius William Estep, 71, retired mail clerk. Mr. Estep moved to the Wine Farm, near Quicksburg, which he purchased, from Washington in 1939 following his retirement. He is survived by a sister, Miss Mabel Estep, of near Quicksburg.

Mrs. Era Lucy Dabney

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 10.—Funeral services were held at Hopewell Methodist Church today for Mrs. Era Lucy Dabney, 86, who died Sunday night. She was the wife of the late C. C. Dabney, and is survived by a daughter, two sisters and three brothers.

Mrs. Frederick G. Cattrell

Mrs. Frederick Gardner Cottrell, wife of the eminent scientist and inventor and long-time Washington resident, died Sunday at her home in Palo Alto, Calif.

Funeral services are to be held there today. Dr. Cottrell was at one time director of the United States Bureau of Mines here, and was well known as the inventor of the Cottrell Precipitator.

Born in California, his wife, Mrs. Jessie Fulton Cottrell was a direct descendant to Robert Fulton, inventor of the first steamboat.

She was a member of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers and of the Woman's Alliance of the All Souls Unitarian Church.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a niece, June Fulton of San Francisco, two nephews, Wallace H. Fulton of Washington and Capt. Eugene Fulton of Los Angeles.

In Memoriam

HERRELL, IDA L. In loving memory of my wife, IDA L. HERRELL, who left us two years ago today, February 11, 1946.
I must remember the silent night is lonely and . . . there is no golden dawn . . . because I must remember love . . . that you are really gone . . . I must remember in my heart . . . the happiness we knew . . . and that my world was one . . . In which I lived with you . . . I roamed the house from room to room . . . I gaze beyond the sea . . . But there is nothing I can do . . . to bring you back to me . . . I have to tell myself again . . . that you are really gone . . . and I can only ask the Lord . . . For strength to carry on

Hearts for Milady

Valentine Gifts Are Sentimental, Sweetly Scented

SCHIAPARELLI, who has just finished showing her latest collection of fashions in Paris, has some cute Valentine tricks this season. At top is a gift item called Two Shocking, a heartshaped cake of soap plus a miniature bottle of Schiaparelli perfume. She also fills big satin hearts with her sachet. Above is Trifari's latest lapel pin in a generous sized heart. Set with moonstones or crystal and pastel stones

IN the game of hearts it's fun to let the symbol of Valentine Day take form in the gift you give mother, sister, wife or best girl. Jewelry and cosmetics, ranging in price from $1.50 to $20, are being offered this year in novel heartshaped packaging

PERFUME firms have created innumerable gift packages for Valentine Day. Hearts and flowers sentimentally adorn the array of special items created by Elizabeth Arden. Sachets and soaps, perfumes and powders, herald the spring season, and highlight your messages of friendship and affection. Especially attractive gifts from the House of Arden include a Blue Grass sachet in a transparent plastic frame; a box of Blue Grass soap, the blue cakes heartshaped and each decorated with a cupid heart and arrow, arranged around a white dove; a bottle of On Dit perfume in a new transparent plastic heart, sprinkled with sequins and nestled in the red satin background of a gilt-edged acetate box.

Earrings Match Wedding Rings

That idea of duplicating wedding rings and making them into earrings has caught on and the "ear-mates" are being made bigger and better today, according to O. M. Resen, the designer who introduced the vogue.

In the newest version, the exact copy of the matrimonial band, made of white palladium, is used as a hoop dangling from a pendant ear attachment upon which a single cabochon ruby gleams.

Most popular design has an orange blossom motif carved in the palladium. The finger rings and their duplicates are quite wide, in keeping with the current fashion trend.

Resen works with his wife, Dorothy, in dreaming up new ideas in wedding rings. They find that modern brides, even though they keep the same husbands, like to change the style of their rings.

Expert Referees in Bout on Make-up for Juniors

Hollywood's make-up stylist and beauty adviser to the film stars, Max Factor, jr., declares that a great deal of unnecessary Mother-vs.-Daughter friction exists because such duos fail to see eye-to-eye on how soon the youngsters should start to use make-up.

Mr. Factor has found that such friction is mainly due to mothers failing to regard the make-up desires of the comparative youngsters from a truly intelligent angle. The parents are inclined to make the mistake of considering their daughters to be semi-infants long after the latter have ceased to be such.

The stylist stresses the point that there aren't many hard-and-fast rules which can be made on this subject, but he suggests that if a 13-year-old wants to use face powder, there is no real harm in this if it is applied sparingly enough. Rouge isn't generally artistically advisable until a girl is at least 17, he rules, and he wishes the younger generation would stick to this same age limit for lipstick use.

Once their daughters have started to practice the make-up art, mothers should completely and correctly instruct their juniors in its procedures.

In Bridal Procession

The marriage of Miss Edna L. Stover to Frank Lawrence Blood took place Saturday morning in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, the Rev. Roland J. Fannon officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. W. V. Price and S. A. Stover of Abilene, Tex., and San Francisco, Calif. Mr. Blood is the son of Mrs. Muriel Blood and Mack H. Blood of Groton, Mass., and Troy, Ohio.

The bride's gown was of satin and she carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. Miss Beatrice Briscoe, maid of honor, wore ice blue satin and carried blue iris and yellow jonquils. Miss Mary Ellen Truitt, wearing a gold gown and carrying a bouquet similar to the maid of honor's, also attended the bride. Bruce A. Trend served as best man and ushers were Henry J. Badini and Joseph P. Patch. A wedding breakfast followed at Willard Hotel.

On return from their honeymoon in Ligonier, Pa., the newlyweds will reside in Kensington, Md.

Lafsky—Blumenthal

Miss Florence Ruth Blumenthal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Blumenthal of Silver Spring, Md., was married on February 1 to Dr. Benjamin Paul Lafsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lafsky.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents by Rabbi Morris Baron, an uncle of the bride, and Rabbi Aaron Volkman.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ankle length gown of greige lace and carried white orchids with the family Bible. Mrs. James R. Powers was matron of honor and Lawrence Blumenthal was his brother-in-law's best man.

The newlyweds will spend their honeymoon at Miami Beach, Fla.

Dimitriou—Eliades

In St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church on February 8 Miss Marika Eliades and James Dimitriou were married. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Eliades of Washington, and her husband is the son of Mrs. George Dimitriou and the late Mr. Dimitriou of Dayton, Ohio. The Rev. A. Laloussis officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin and a veil of illusion held by a crown of seed pearls. Her flowers were a bouquet of calla lilies.

The bride's sister, Miss Pauline Eliades, was maid of honor, costumed in ice blue satin and carrying a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Theodore Kessis, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Anthony Eliades, brother of the bride, and George Boudouris.

Top Brass Spares Buttons To Adorn Birthday Gadget Made for 'Sonny' Whitney

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

QUITE THE niftiest gadget chez the Assistant Secretary of Air, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, is a giant silver box given him last birthday by his wife. It is covered with engraved autographs, studded with insignia our great military commanders and a few selected lesser lights wore in battle. To assemble all these trophies as a surprise for "Sonny" took quite some doing on Eleanor Whitney's part. On the lid, top left, is the Forrestal autograph surmounted by a naval insignia; on the right a uniform button, contributed by General Eisenhower.

Down in the left hand corner no less a notable than General Pershing signed. (He was Sonny's commander in World War I.) Then there's a lapel insignia worn by Sonny's old friend, Col. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, who won the Congressional Medal of Honor during the North African invasion. Center, of course, there is Gen. George Marshall's John Hancock and a nice, shiny button.

An amusing tale hangs on this button. General Marshall was in China when Mrs. W. wrote explaining her project. The General answered that the Chinese loved shiny objects, that practically everything except the actual buttons and hooks needed to keep his uniform together had been stolen. Nothing daunted, Eleanor Whitney sallied forth, bought several sets of buttons and whatnots appropriate to generals, dispatched them to China. General Marshall thanked Mrs. Whitney, wrote they were just what he had needed and—sent one of the buttons back! To cap the climax, he wired the mystified Sonny (who still knew nothing about his present) a congratulatory birthday message. Oh! and as an anticlimax, we forgot to mention that Winston Churchill signed, too. What he should have sent, but didn't, is a zipper from one of his famous siren suits!

Cackling in the House

UP ON THE HILL there is much commotion about passing E. R. P. (European Recovery Plan). Connoisseurs of the less subtle forms of wit have been having themselves a mildly amusing time. Here's a sample. Lewis Douglas, our Ambassador to the Court of St. James's was testifying on the Marshall Plan, Representative Oren Harris (Dem., Ark.) was having an inning cross questioning. The subject under discussion was whether the economic stability of Europe is necessary to obtain political stability. "Isn't it a question of which comes first, the hen or the egg?" queried Harris sarcastically. Then, Douglas, utterly deadpan, retorted "In this case it's doubtful there will be an egg if there isn't a rooster!" Like a well fed, happy barnyard of poultry, the House cackled uproariously.

Authors to Speak To Writers Club

Joaquin Gutierrez, author and son of the Costa Rican Ambassador, and Lewis Lofton Moneyway, an instructor in writing, will be guest speakers at the meeting of Professional Writers' Club, 6:30 p. m., Thursday at Fairfax Hotel.

Mr. Gutierrez will discuss "The Literary Situation in Latin America." Mr. Moneyway's topic will be "Things That Ruin a Story." The program will also include songs by Miss Dorothy M. Kane. Hostesses for the meeting will be Mrs. Verna L. Hurdle and Mrs. Bernice Jay.

'Simple Justice,' Says Secretary

Equal Pay for Women Workers Urged

By Genevieve Reynolds

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach yesterday endorsed the "Women's Equal Pay Act of 1947 as a "matter of simple justice." The legislation would require employers to pay women workers the same rates men receive for comparable work.

Presenting his arguments for the measure before a House Subcommittee on Labor and Education, he said," If a woman does the same job, or a job requiring comparable skill, she ought to be paid the same rate as a man.

"There is no sex differential in the food she buys or the rent she pays," continued the Secretary. "And there should be none in her pay envelope."

He told the committee that inequities in the payment of wages based on sex lead to labor disputes and to general labor unrest. "The practice of paying women unequal pay for equal work tends to depress the wages of all employes and in consequence to reduce the standard of living of all workers and the families dependent upon them," he asserted, adding, "sex differentials in wage rates are a serious brake upon the best use of our labor resources and to that extent inhibit full production."

Miss Frieda Miller, chief, Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, went into considerable detail, backed with statistics, to show the need for legislation providing equal pay for equal work." At the present time there are more married than single women in the labor market," she explained. "Of the women working, 38 per cent are single; 16 per cent widowed or divorced, and 46 per cent are married. In fact, 84 out of every 100 working said that they were compelled to in order to support themselves or families."

She pointed out that the legislation if enacted would affect about 24 million, including 5½ million women workers.

Miss Miller cited several surveys that proved women were not being given equal pay for equal work.

Two of the most powerful women's organizations in the country—The General Federation of Women's Clubs and the National League of Women Voters—sent representatives to testify in favor of the bill, which was introduced last July by Representative Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, and by Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas of California.

Speaking for the League of Women Voters, Miss Anna Lord Strauss, national president, gave reasons for endorsing the bill, viz, removal of unfair discrimination against women in employment based solely on sex, would have favorable effect on the Nation's economy.

Mrs. Leslie Wright, national chairman of the general federation's legislation department, advanced substantially the same reasons as Miss Strauss and Secretary Schwellenbach for urging passage of the bill.

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

TWO veteran campaigners for women's rights met without argument over techniques or approaches yesterday when both turned out to indorse Bill H.R. 4273 which calls for equal pay for equal work for women. Mrs. Leslie Wright, national chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs legislative department (left), chats with Miss Anna Lord Strauss, national president, League of Women Voters (right), prior to testifying at hearings held by the subcommittee of the House on Education and Labor

Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society will give its "First Report Luncheon" at 12 noon at Ruby Foo's Restaurant. A report will be made on the progress of preparations and ticket sales for the victory banquet and dance the auxiliary will give on February 25, in the Mayflower Hotel.

Women's Council Marks 53d Birthday

A variety show of popular song adaptations highlighted celebration of the National Council of Jewish Women's fifty-third anniversary yesterday at the Jewish Community Center.

After luncheon plus birthday cake came skits and songs with Mrs. George Nordlinger enacting the central character, a council worker at a convention.

Favorites with the audience were numerous original choruses sung by Mrs. Herman Becker and Mrs. I. E. Levinson and a song "Just Plain Members Now," by five of the organization's former presidents. Mrs. Kate Hertsberg sang "The Anniversary Song."

The accompaniment was by Mrs. Jesse I. Miller and Mrs. Morris Gewirz directed the show.

WHEN the Army and the press get together they laughingly exchange headaches. So it was at the American Newspaper Women's Club's reception yesterday afternoon honoring the new Chief of Veterans Affairs, Maj. Gen. Carl R. Gray, jr., and Mrs. Gray. Caught in a gala mood are (left to right) Mrs. Gray, General Gray; Mrs. William Canby, club president, and Miss Florence Taaffe, club member and hostess of the day

Newspaper Women Honor Gen. and Mrs. Carl Gray, Jr.

When President Truman appointed Maj. Gen. Carl R. Gray, jr., Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to succeed Gen. Omar N. Bradley, his chief instructions were, "Bring a sense of humor with you to Washington."

That the general obeyed the Chief Executive's instructions was proved at the American Newspaper Women's Club's tea and reception yesterday honoring the new Veterans' Administrator and Mrs. Gray. Make a speech, suggested Mrs. William N. Canby, club president. "Oh, no," replied the general, "I am having too much fun to spoil it."

So speeches were held over for handshaking and getting acquainted.

General Gray says that the most unique club he has ever joined is the "Post Mortem Club" that holds its pow wows at the Army and Navy Club. Don't rush girls—it's an all-stag affair and the proceedings are strictly a male secret. Thus confides the general.

But back to the party, which was held in the club's headquarters, 1604 20th st. nw., with Miss Florence Taaffe as hostess.

Among the Guests

Glimpsed here and there among the some 100 guests were the Chief of Army Special Services, Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, and Mrs. Reynolds; Col. and Mrs. E. C. Johnston, Col. and Mrs. C. M. Virtue, Col. and Mrs. John T. Cole, Deputy Chief of Army Chaplains, Col. Patrick J. Ryan; the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and Mrs. Robert E. Freer; Representative and Mrs. Edward Devitt of Minnesota; the vice president of CBS, Earl Gammons, and Mrs. Gammons; the managing editor of The Washington Post, J. R. Wiggins, and Mrs. Wiggins; Mrs. John J. Courtney and her daughter, Miss Mary Courtney.

Still others were Mr. and Mrs. Nat Finney — he's with Cowles Publications, and Mr. and Mrs. Allan Briggs and their house guest, Miss Elaine Campbell of Minneapolis, Minn.

In a private huddle were Col. and Mrs. LeRoy Cox — he's the former Dean at Wofford College, Spartanburg, South Carolina; Mrs. Marshall Clagett, Mrs. Frances Lide; the Chief of Protocol of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Avelyra; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Luther Sheldon, and Miss Louise Alexander.

Receiving the guests were Miss Grace McGerr, vice president of the club; Mrs. Canby, president; Miss Etta Mai Russell and Mrs. James W. Boyer, jr.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

I have a few small scratches on my mahogany furniture that show quite plainly. Is there any way to make them less prominent or eliminate them entirely? E. W. W.

Painting carefully along the scratches with iodine or with a mahogany stain will make them inconspicuous.

Persistent sponging with the polish remover (holding the spot over an absorbent pad meanwhile) should get rid of the stain. Wash the spot afterward with soap and water. Or, if you wish, you might try one of the solutions sold by the housewares section of department stores for removing lipstick.

I have a quantity of country lard that tastes and smells fresh, but when any of it is heated the house is filled with the most disagreeable odor. Is there anything I can add to it? M. H.

The disagreeable odor of the lard could be due to several things. The lard could be rancid; it could have come from very old animals or have been carelessly prepared for rendering; it could be water-soured because not all water was removed during rendering; or it could have become flavored in storage by contact with other foods or materials having an odor. I am inclined to think your difficulty is not rancidity since the lard seems fresh except when heated. It may not be possible to completely remove the odor, but you might try melting it and when it is hot, but not smoking, cooking a few sliced raw potatoes in it. This additional heating will remove any moisture and the potatoes will absorb the odors. If the lard should be rancid, this treatment will only temporarily improve the flavor. The keeping quality of home rendered lard can be much improved by addition of hydrogenated vegetable shortening to it while it is being rendered. Use it in the proportion of two or three pounds of hydrogenated vegetable shortening to 50 pounds of lard. After rendering, lard should be stored in tinned metal pails or cans which have tight-fitting lids. Enamelware or crockery are not usually well suited to lard storage because they usually cannot be tightly sealed.

I have a crocheted table cloth which was made from cotton bought during the war. When it was washed, some of the cotton got white and some stayed ecru. I would like to know if there is any way to remove all the color. I have tried chlorine bleach and dye remover with no success. Also, what kind of establishment would handle this type of work? C. A. E.

Perhaps sodium perborate will remove the ecru color. Soak for a half hour in sodium perborate and soap suds. Use four tablespoons of perborate to a pint of soapy water. Rinse thoroughly. If this lightens the darker part of the table cloth but doesn't remove the color completely, repeat. If this bleach doesn't change the ecru at all, tinting the cloth ecru or yellow would make it usable.

Some local cleaners and dyers will do a bleach job of this type but the work is 100 per cent at the owner's risk.

I was interested in seeing the letter from D.J.R. in your column the other day in which she told of difficulty with dust and worms in the cracks in the floor. I have been plagued with the same condition and no amount of vacuum cleaning or DDT seemed to help. However, through a relative, I received leaflet No. 150 from the United States Department of Agriculture. It proved most informative and helpful and I thought D.J.R. might like to know about it. M. M.

How can I remove rust from white clothing that has been washed and ironed? Also from white clothes that have not yet been laundered? N. G. S.

The following should be effective in removing the rust stains, whether they have been laundered or not: Spread stain over a bowl of hot water and apply a few drops of oxalic acid solution (3 tablespoons of the crystals to 1 pint of water). Or put the crystals directly on the stain and moisten with hot water. Rinse in hot water, and repeat until stain disappears. The acid crystals can be purchased at the drug store. There's also a very effective rust-removing soap that comes in tubes and is sold in drug stores, including a large chain store near the corner of 14th and New York ave., nw.

I understand there is a product on the market for removing lipstick from one's lips other than just ordinary cleansing creams. If you know of such a product, will you tell me where it can be obtained? A. K. B.

A check of local cosmetic counters has failed to turn up such a product. Do any of our readers know where it can be found?

Can you tell me of a way to remove decals from painted walls? I. P.

Sponge the decals with a cloth wrung out in hot vinegar. Allow to stand for about 20 minutes, redampening occasionally with the vinegar. You should then be able to pull the decals from the wall.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Frightened Underprivileged Childhood, Including Slavey Treatment in Foster Home, Wife Is Inseparably Tied by Fear to Her Brood

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and children are wonderful. My problem is that I can't bear to leave the children with anyone, which only makes me a poor mother, cross and irritable, and puts my husband in the position of waiting for the children to grow up before we can be social companions—and he may get tired of that.

Actually there is no one with whom I could leave the children, except my mother-in-law, who, although she is a nice person and has been a good mother to me in many respects, just can't be bothered with children. They make her nervous and she is only happy when "on the go."

My husband and I have been invited on trips several times, but I get just sick at the thought of leaving the children, although I am perfectly willing for him to go, as I feel he shouldn't be penalized by my attitude. But why am I this way? Is it because I think I can take better care of them than anyone else? Or because I fear two things (as I do), namely: that they will bother someone; that something might happen to them.

She Anticipates Surprise Answer

MAYBE my childhood has something to do with it. There were five children in our family. I was next to the eldest. My mother worked out a lot during my childhood; my father believed in treating children like mules, and did; and it seems I was always trying to protect the little ones from him and my eldest sister, who was unkind too.

Eventually our parents were divorced and the children were scattered. Some were adopted; others went to foster homes, as I did. In my new home I had the responsibility of caring for two young children, always with the fear hanging over my head that if anything happened to those children I would lose my home. I was then 12 years old.

At 19, still in this foster home, I started nurse's training in a hospital, where I worked until I married at 22; and in that time I still had to care for these children at night and on my days off.

As a mother, I am physically healthy and never worry about myself; but I am afraid to let my daughter, 4, go out to play unless she stays in my sight, as we live on a busy street and she seems to have no fear of running across streets or visiting and talking to anyone. I don't want her to go through life fear-filled as I am; and am trying to teach her how to cross streets so she will be prepared for school next year.

Since no other mother of my acquaintance ever seems to mind leaving her children with anyone, any time, I would appreciate your advice, which I know will be good and probably surprising. R. B.

She Is Denying Her Deep Desire

DEAR R. B.: Neurotic anxiety, from which you suffer, usually stems from unconscious conflict between (1) an impulse to act in a certain way to satisfy personal pleasure-seeking desire and (2) fear of being punished if one acts that way.

Self-centered pleasure-seeking impulses are indigenous to being human; they are part-and-parcel of the instincts one is born with.

Fear of being punished if one indulges them is an emotion planted, a conviction inculcated, in the early rounds of life-experience, either by assiduous well-meant social training in instinct-control or by a case history such as yours—in which the child feels that his very existence is dependent on making himself useful and inoffensive to stronger, seemingly indifferent, potentially hostile persons whose requirements of him allow no place, no sympathy or support, for the enactment of pleasure-seeking impulses on his part.

Consequently, the pleasure impulse is repressed. The person, as adult or child, no longer entertains that specific desire, so far as he knows. However, as an instinct it is still alive and kicking in the unconscious; but when it tries to emerge, it is blocked by latent fear of punishment, and the net effect on personality is a diffuse but acute seizure of anxiety.

Has Healthy Yen For Normal Leisure

THE PERSON feels anxious, threatened, he knows not why, because only the fear and not the precipitating impulse—which once again has been deeply repressed—gets into his consciousness; and he may engage in compulsive, neurotic, self-abnegating forms of behavior to try to allay his anxiety.

That's how it is with you, I think. Your fundamental desire—as an overworked underprivileged child at home, again as a slavey with two children to tend, and now as a mother in your own right,—has been to get some footloose fun out of life and not always be tied to a child-care routine.

But your early conditioning conspired in every way to make the impulse impossible of fulfillment realistically, and also an idea fraught by terrible risks if you thought of it,—so you gave it up and it went underground, to kick back in the anxious mother-hen performance described.

In brief, you really want to do what you think you dread doing; and are letting your childhood fears and inhibitions—which were involuntary reactions to the early situations that aroused them—dominate your present-day behavior and tie you down needlessly. And isn't that silly? For advice: Find a reliable person—not just "anybody,"—to lift the load, and take time out with your husband at every opportunity. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Best Fruit Buys Are Ingredients For Gelatin Treat

1 envelope plain unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1/3 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup hot water
½ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
6 orange slices
6 prunes (cooked until tender)
¼ pound cottage cheese

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add sugar, salt, and hot water, and stir until dissolved. Add orange juice and lemon juice. Rinse bread pan in cold water and pour in jelly to the depth of about ½-inch. Allow to congeal. On this jelly, place six slices of oranges (or segments cut in small pieces). Cover with remaining orange jelly which has been cooled and allowed to congeal somewhat. Chill and cut in squares. On each square, place a prune stuffed with cottage cheese and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise. This recipe makes six servings.

Blood and Thunder on Radio Has Lesson for Young Child

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

A mother does not need to be told that children become radio addicts and spend a good share of their leisure time with ears pasted to the instrument. This behavior is more acute from 6 to 12 than after this age. The older child has such a multitude of interests, both social and school, that the radio has to take its place as only one of them.

Mrs. F. Y. T. thinks her 7-year-old boy spends too much time indoors listening to the radio. She writes, "I deplore his demands to buy all kinds of advertised foods so he can send box tops and get some silly trophy. His sleep is disturbed by the excitement of the blood-and-thunder programs and he tends to act like a young criminal, pointing his gun at everyone and saying in a hoarse voice, 'Come clean!'

"Shall I deny him the right to listen to the radio and what shall I do about the advertising dupes?"

Perhaps you would be happier about it all if you added up the advantages and tried to overlook the disadvantages. Children do need and can absorb a lot of excitement by way of adventure and blood-and-thunder programs. They are denied any real part in such adventure and get their satisfactions vicariously.

No doubt his play is purely imitative. But children may get real benefit from freeing themselves from angry, mean, revengeful emotions, which they could not otherwise express, by pretending to want to murder grownups, or do them harm. This is a harmless way of getting rid of strong emotions which our civilization denies them the right to express.

Maybe he doesn't get enough play outdoors. Have you investigated his play situations? If they become too complex for him and he is helpless to control them, he may take refuge in passive listening rather than in open conflict on the playground.

As for the advertising beamed at children, it has some advantages in that it encourages the child to listen carefully, to fulfill directions and to have the experience of getting personal mail. It puts the child on a par with other children who have sent for and received the same tokens.

If the rewards are less fascinating than their descriptions, then the child has learned caution and discrimination in evaluating spoken advertisements. A good lesson at a relatively cheap price.

Energy Foods Are Essentials In Diets for the Middle-Aged

By Ida Jean Kain

The minute you hit middle age you started putting on weight, although you ate no more food. Worse yet, you're still gaining. Quite naturally you would like this mystery fully explained. That's easy. It's just a case of overeating for your present needs.

It's probably true that you do not eat any more food than you used to, but you require considerably less. And that's where the extra calories come in. Activity wanes, but appetite doesn't, for the memory of good food lingers on.

When you stop to figure it out, it's easy to understand that less activity uses fewer calories. But here's a tougher proposition: Why is it you are so much hungrier now than you were at normal weight? In some cases, excess fat clogs the body fires and not enough energy is derived from the food eaten. Then you overeat in an attempt to get more energy, and more fat is stored. Also, the accumulation of fat in the body makes for fatigue; you feel tired, and overeat to overcome the tiredness.

Poor food habits can be at the bottom of all this. Often the meals do not nourish the vital tissues, and hidden hunger results. It's a form of malnutrition—not undernutrition, for there are calories to spare. But it's poor nutrition when the meals do not furnish the essential nutrients; the resulting tissue hunger brings on a constant desire to eat. Hidden hunger can make itself felt in a number of ways, but for the overweight it is apt to be a craving for excess food, flabby muscles and lack of energy. Actually the craving is for the missing essentials., but appetite cannot discriminate and all you realize is, you're hungry. Well, if you prefer white bread and butter and rich desserts, those are the foods you take to satisfy hunger. That way you keep on gaining, but you still have hidden hunger. This can go around and around.

What to do? Start eating the energy-building foods and skip the fatteners. It's the only way to lose weight and pick up pep! Have daily one pint of buttermilk, a whole orange or half a grapefruit plus two other fresh fruits, one green vegetable, one yellow vegetable and a raw vegetable salad, . . . vinegar and seasoning. Have a liberal serving of lean meat or fish (not fried), one egg or a serving of cheese. Restrict bread to three thin slices 100 per cent whole grain. Bolster this menu with one vitamin concentrate.

Million Women Are Now Running Own Businesses

More than a million women in the United States were working in their own business, profession or trade as of last October, the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor has reported.

The figures, based on Census Bureau data, showed nearly 300,000 women were operating farms of their own, making the self-employed total about 8 per cent of all employed women.

The bureau reported about 120,000 women shifted into self-employment in the period between August, 1945, and August, 1946.

Navy School Plans Summer Prep Course

Bainbridge, Md., Feb. 10 (AP).—The Naval Academy preparatory school, in operation here since abandonment of the 48-million-dollar Navy boot camp, will be supplemented this summer by a college prep school for enlisted men.

The school, designed to prepare 350 students for entrance to college and universities under the Navy ROTC program, will be opened as soon as the academy prep school classes for the summer, according to Capt. John J. O'Donnell, commanding officer. Present students will go either to Annapolis or return to their enlisted status, with about 70 per cent of the candidates slated to receive academy appointments.

The school, combining both the academy and general college preparatory divisions, is known as the United States Naval and College Preparatory School. In the event a universal military training law is adopted, however, it will be prepared to open its doors to trainees, Captain O'Donnell said.

Receipts to Pay For Washington County Schools

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 10 (AP).—The Washington County Board of Education and the county commissioners agreed today that construction of two schools and an addition to another—to cost about $920,000—would be financed on a pay-as-you-go basis.

The agreement broke a deadlock between the two bodies.

A compromise was worked out under which the three projects will be completed within the next 18 months and paid for out of county receipts.

A school for county Negroes, to cost $415,000, will be built in Hagerstown, a $225,000 building will be erected at Fountaindale and a $280,000 addition will be constructed at Boonsboro High School.

The two boards also agreed that sanitary facilities at 20 rural schools will be improved as funds become available.

Anglers Protest New Va. Setup

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 10.—A proposed change in the duties of the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries has drawn the opposition of the Fredericksburg-Rappahannock Chapter of the Izaak Walton League.

The group went on record as opposing a proposal by Governor Tuck to reorganize the State Government and set up a new department of conservation and development, with the game commission serving as one of eight boards.

Chapter officials said the proposed move would deprive the commission of its "complete authority to administer laws affecting wildlife and fish."

Use for Coffee Grounds Wins VA Idea Award

Martinsburg, Va., Feb. 10—A suggestion that coffee grounds be used for housecleaning purposes brought the top award in a contest for practical suggestion conducted at the Newton D. Baker Veterans Hospital here.

Winner of the cash prize and a certificate from Gen. Omar Bradley, former Veterans Administrator, was Harry L. Karns, custodian superintendent at the hospital, who suggested that used coffee grounds from the mess halls could be used successfully as a sweeping compound. Officials of the hospital said inauguration of his plan would save the VA "several hundred dollars a year."

Three Virginians Make 'Notable Presbyterians'

Richmond, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—Three Virginians were among the 10 men and women chosen for 1948 in the annual list of "Notable Presbyterians" by the editors of The Presbyterian Outlook, independent Southern Presbyterian weekly.

They were Henry M. Brimm, librarian of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond; Mrs. Thomas H. Grafton, dean of Mary Baldwin College, Staunton, Va., and N. B. Etheridge, business man of Norfolk, Va.

Courses at Academy Are Continuing Study

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 10 (AP).—Midshipmen don't take "courses" in the Naval Academy's department of English, history and government.

Their four years of study in that department are woven together, Professor E. B. Potter said today.

"In our department we are able to link the studies together rather intimately, building from year to year on what has been taught in the past, so that our curriculum becomes a sort of continuous single four-year course," he said.

Hodges Recovering

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—State Senator Stanley Hodges of Franklin, W. Va., was reported in a "very satisfactory" condition by University of Virginia Hospital authorities here today.

The legislator was operated on more than a week ago.

Sorority to Dance

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 10.—Fredericksburg's "Valentine Girl of 1948" will be chosen at a benefit dance sponsored by Alpha Mu Beta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, international sorority, Friday night in the Elks ballroom. Proceeds will be used for cancer research, a major project of the sorority.

26 Flee Baltimore Fire

Baltimore, Feb. 10 (AP).—Two multiple-alarm fires in Baltimore today forced 26 persons to flee from their homes into freezing weather and caused the injury of three women.

Washington And Annapolis Road Planned

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 10 (AP).—State Road Commission plans for Annapolis and vicinity include a new bridge across the Severn River and an Annapolis-Washington expressway, William F. Childs, jr., chief engineer, disclosed today.

Childs said the bridge, to be placed northwest of the present railroad bridge, should be under construction next year.

Childs said as soon as weather permits, borings will be started for the bridge.

The Washington-Annapolis highway is to be dual lane in type, and split at Camp Parole. One lane will enter Annapolis by way of West st. The other will swing around the city, pass the West Annapolis of the proposed Naval Academy stadium and run directly to the new Severn River bridge.

The new bridge will connect with the Ritchie Highway and the Revell Highway, at Winchester, leading to the Sandy Point Ferry.

The expressway and bridge will carry traffic between Washington, southern Maryland and points in the area across the Severn and to the new Chesapeake Bay crossing.

Plans for the bridge do not include tracks for the Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad, Childs said.

Oyster Output Again Declines In Maryland

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 10 (AP).—Another drop in Maryland oyster production from September through January was announced today by the Tidewater Fisheries Department.

A A decrease of 50,000 bushels in oyster production in the period compared to the same time last year was reported.

This season's output was 1,607,357 bushels against 1,657,838 last season. Of this year's crop, 63,072 bushels were taxed for export, compared to 59,790 last year.

Out-of-State oysters on which taxes were paid in the State showed Maryland is still importing large numbers.

During the September through January period, 347,767 bushels of oysters were imported by Maryland compared to 255,744 last season.

WFMD Manager Is Voted Honor

Frederick, Md., Feb. 10 (Spl.).—William Hardy, general manager of radio station WFMD and WFMD-FM, has been selected as Frederick's "Outstanding Young Man of 1947."

Twenty-seven years old, Hardy is president of the Frederick Junior Chamber of Commerce, served as general chairman of the city's Christmas seal campaign and helped lead numerous other civic organizations and campaigns.

His selection was announced yesterday by a Junior Chamber of Commerce committee.

Freeman and Darden To Be Hopkins Guests

Baltimore, Feb. 10 (AP).—Pulitzer prize winner Douglas Southall Freeman and President Colgate W. Darden, jr., of the University of Virginia will be guests of honor February 23, at Johns Hopkins University's 72d annual commemoration day exercises, Hopkins announced today.

Darden served in four Congresses and was Governor of Virginia during the term which ended in 1946.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

"We'll See Ya Around, Mac"

Most of our items about policemen are complimentary. Here's one that isn't, from an observer whose integrity is beyond question:

It was about 2:30 in the morning, and the counterman in the all-night lunchroom had just served three wheatcakes to the cop.

The officer surveyed the wheats with evident pleasure and said:

"Mac, let's have about three slabs of butter, and some bacon, huh?"

As Mac turned to fetch the embellishments, the policeman's partner appeared at the door.

"We've got a 'disorderly party' call—but go ahead and finish first. Hey Mac, fix me a cheeseburger to go, and I'll eat it in the car while I wait."

Mac nodded assent, and busied himself with his work. The cheeseburger was neatly wrapped in waxed paper, and the first policeman's every need was carefully ministered to—down to the extra cup of coffee.

"See ya around, Mac," he called as he left.

Mac acknowledged his departure, and wearily wiped his hands on his apron. As usual, neither of the policemen had even mentioned payment for their food.

MEMO TO WIVES

It grieves me to note that many husbands are still guilty of the old habit of carrying letters around in their pockets for weeks before mailing them.

Hardly a day goes by without additional evidence coming to my attention. For example, we'll talk about billions and trillions one day, and that evening somebody's little woman will sit down and pen her views on the subject.

When she's finished she'll say, "Henry, mail this for me on the way to work tomorrow," and Henry will keep right on reading about Walter Haight's relatives, but from force of habit will murmur, "Yes, dear."

The next morning Henry's wife kisses him goodby while simultaneously slapping the letter into his hand like a process server getting rid of a subpena.

"Now don't forget to mail it, Henry," she cautions. "Don't do like you did with that birthday card for Aunt Bertha that you . . ."

"Yes, dear; yes, dear," says Henry as he escapes out the front door. And when he is safely out of earshot he probably mumbles: "What does she think I am—a child or something? She tells me the same thing over and over again."

Three weeks later, I get the letter which Henry has just discovered while looking in his overcoat pocket for some pipe cleaners. Invariably it begins:

"Since you are apparently confused by (whatever the subject is) I hasten to write at once, before other readers get you even more mixed up than you already are . . ."

AFTERTHOUGHT

Although I've gone out of the strange place name business, I find that I closed up shop without tying up all the loose ends.

I refer to Virginia's Bull Pasture, Cow Pasture and Calf Pasture Rivers.

Six District Liners are in general agreement that the Bull Pasture and the Cow Pasture converge above Millboro Springs, and that the Calf Pasture parallels those two streams at a distance of some dozen miles.

Those furnishing this information were: Alfred R. James of 600 20th st. nw.; Mrs. John J. Laing of 747 S. Mason st., Harrisonburg, Va.; W. Ralph Gray of 6510 20th ave., Hyattsville, Md.; Sara S. Bobbitt of 214 Lexington dr., Silver Spring, Md.; Maj. G. W. Edgerly of 3908 McKinley st. nw., and Helen J. Helms of McDowell, Va.

Incidentally, the streams were named for the herds of buffalo that roamed there, and not for cattle as you might have supposed.

NEW YORK.—Two checks I cashed for a former editor of Life. They dispel the legend that the glib confidence man who works the theater sector shies clear of newspapermen because they can holler in print and besides they're hep to all rackets. . . . I cashed the first check because he said his former wife was planning to jail him for nonpayment of alimony, jealous at the news that he was about to marry his true love. I cashed the second check because he and the young lady said they needed it for the wedding. The next day, when they reported the former wife was assuaged and that they had been married that morning in a N. J. village, I gave a surprise wedding supper for them at a house complete with champagne, wedding cake and 20 friends . . . Both checks bounced. A year later I learned that they hadn't been married at all.

An invitation to a cocktail party given by Lana Turner. It ented late, and when I came home I reported that I'd been at a party for Lana Turner. Our eldest son asked: "Lana Turner? Who's Lana Turner, pop?" . . . Our second son snickered: "Who's Lana Turner? That's a silly question. Everybody knows him."

A Christmas gift from Charles Cushing, the magazine publisher and bridge champion. Because Mr. Cushing is a bachelor he is the recipient of many gifts from optimistic ladies and hopeful mothers-in-law. It's become difficult for his friends to think of a gift which he already doesn't possess. And so my wife sent him a loaf of bread, a jug of wine and Rita Hayworth's private telephone number.

A recording of "Jingle Bells." One December night I heard our children singing a strange version of the song. It had a censorable phrase never uttered by children. I delivered the customary lecture—that such words are okay strictly among us men or with their friends in the park, but never when there are ladies present. "By the way," I asked them, "where did you hear this version of 'Jingle Bells'?" They told me that they had been playing the Bing Crosby-Andrews Sister recording which they found in our closet. I played it and discovered it was a private recording of a Crosby blow-up in which Bing had skipped eight beats and then ad-libbed the rest in perfect but censorable rhyme.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

How 'Chief' Vaughan Lost Battle

By Drew Pearson

Harry Truman has the patience of Job when it comes to his likable, grandstanding, trouble-causing military aide, Harry Vaughan. But he nearly lost his patience—for keeps—when Vaughan tried to promise himself to be top White House aide last week. In fact, Vaughan came very near promoting himself right out of a job.

Vaughan

Here's the inside story of what happened:

Vaughan handed the President a slip of paper, purportedly announcing the appointment of Col. Robert B. Landry as the new White House aide for the Air Forces. On the slip of paper Vaughan had also listed himself as "chief armed forces aide and coordinator of veterans' affairs." The other Army, Navy and Air Force aides were listed as his assistants. This was a new departure in White House history, since hitherto all White House aides have been of equal rank. There has been no top boss.

The President glanced at Vaughan's handiwork, but did not read it—the same mistake he made when Henry Wallace sent him his speech on Russia. Innocently, Truman thought it was an announcement of Colonel Landry's appointment as Air Force aide, and gave the Vaughan list to Charlie Ross, White House publicity chief, with instructions to release it to the press.

Ross read the list later in his own office and hit the ceiling. Taking Vaughan's slip of paper, Ross rushed back to the President's office and asked if Truman had read Vaughan's memo thoroughly. The President looked at it. Then he also hit the ceiling.

Meantime, Vaughan, irked at Ross for withholding the news from the press, held his own press conference, and announced himself as boss of all White House aids.

For the next 3 hours the White House was in an uproar. No one inside the White House is supposed to make a statement to the press except Press Secretary Ross, and debate raged on the expediency of repudiating Vaughan's unauthorized statement to the press. Truman was furious at his military aide, but hesitated to slap him down publicly.

Finally, it was decided to announce that Vaughan's self-promotion announcement was a "misapprehension." Privately, however, Truman used much stronger language in dressing-down Vaughan for the trouble he had caused. After it was over, the precocious former manufacturers' representative from St. Louis seemed quite content to keep his old job in the ranks of the four armed forces aides to President Truman.

Probe or Politics

Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan is trying to keep the lid on a hot feud that is raging inside his Appropriations Subcommittee, now supposed to be investigating Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma and other grain speculators.

At a closed-door meeting last week, Senator Theodore Green of Rhode Island, Democrat, charged that Ferguson and other Republican members were deliberately prolonging the probe so that hearings on the speculations of Thomas, Ed Pauley and White House Physician Wallace Graham can be held during the coming Presidential campaign.

'At the rate we're going, this investigation will last until next November," Green asserted angrily. "I'm not in favor of the investigation being used as a political football.

Republican Senator William Knowland of California, presiding in Chairman Ferguson's absence, denied that the GOP was trying to get any political advantage out of the speculator probe. It would be foolish to start the hearings until the committee has made a full investigation of the market trading of Senator Thomas and others, Knowland argued.

"Well, how long is that going to take?" demanded Green. "How soon can we get started on the hearings and in what order do we plan to put on witnesses? It's high time we reached a decision about these things."

Senator Knowland replied that he couldn't answer Green's questions because no one knew as yet how long the preliminary investigation would take. However, Green refused to accept this explanation, He was so furious that he refused to vote on a motion authorizing the investigating committee to spend an initial $20,000 for the employment of five sleuths and a stenographer.

Note—This column has already supplied Senator Ferguson a raft of material on Senator Thomas' speculation, and will be glad to supply a lot more if the committee is really interested.

The Arctic Lobby

Alaska has its lobbyists, too. At present it has organized a lobby—just as intense as Pan American Airways'—to block the reappointment of able, fearless Ernest Gruening as Governor of Alaska.

Alaskan canning and shipping lobbyists all have been beating at the back door of the White House in opposition to Gruening. They don't like his drive for lower maritime freight rates, and for higher taxes on fishing, canning and shipping.

Skillful backstage operator for the lobby is Seattle's Gil Skinner of the Alaskan Steamship Navigation Co.

However, Alaskan "big business" is going to be disappointed. When his term expires March 29, Governor Gruening is going to be reappointed.

Should Truman Threaten To Resign?

Former Congressman Howard McMurray of Wisconsin has proposed a daring plan to Senator McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

He proposes that President Truman resign—unless the Republican Congress adopts a detailed six point program: on foreign policy, taxes, housing, cost of living, race discrimination and social security.

The former Wisconsin Congressman urges that Truman go before a joint session of Congress and propose that either this basic program be adopted or warn that he will resign on May 6, thus making Joe Martin President. This would then place all responsibility squarely on Republican shoulders.

Note—McGrath didn't particularly like the idea.

When I am weary

Sometimes I feel so tired that . . . I want to rest all day . . . And yet I have so many tasks . . . I ought to put away . . . I struggle with my conscience and . . . The body I possess . . . And weigh my weariness against . . . The value of success . . . Of course I know my problem and . . . The answer to it too . . . And how much sacrifice it takes . . . To make a dream come true . . . And I have all the eagerness . . . Of mind and heart and soul . . . To turn my every energy . . . To my important goal . . . But when my eyes are tired and . . . They feel inclined to close . . .
